Beheading Women
England Is Shocked
Once More, About Gold
What Wages for Relief?

By Arthur Brisbane

From every point of view the beheading of women by Mr. Hitler's government seems to have been a painfully disgusting performance. The women's hands were bound with steel chains, in fear, perhaps, that they might bite through strings or straps. The agile headsman in full dress cut off both heads in six minutes. The women were beheaded out of doors in the night, just before dawn, with floodlights for the headsman's work.

Witnesses of the killings praise the composure of the two women. Each walked to her death erect, wrists chained behind her, showing no sign of fear. An eye witness said "they set a good example to our men, whom we usually have to drag to the scaffold."

Neither woman uttered a word. They spent their last few hours, Sunday night and Monday morning before daylight "drinking wine and coffee and smoking uncountable, expensive cigarettes." Prison rules allowed each one to spend four dollars for her final celebration.

Both were executed in prison dresses of blue denim, wearing heavy woolen socks made for male convicts.

It would be interesting to know what was going on in Chancellor Hitler's mind when he added that performance to his record, especially as he did not behead, merely imprisoned, the Polish count, who arranged the spying and engaged the women to work for him.

British newspapers are, in big type, shocked that two women, "both young and one beautiful," should have been beheaded. What difference the "young and beautiful" makes, is not clear. Hitler might reply that he borrowed the idea from that sturdy Briton, Henry VIII. But Henry died long ago; the last woman was beheaded in England 250 years ago.

You may see, in the Tower of London, beside the rack and thumb screw, the block on which Lord Lovat was beheaded on Tower Hill, in 1747. In modern Britain you are hanged for ordinary crime, and shot for military crimes.

Lord Beaverbrook, in his Daily Express, says:

"Germany has a secret so sinister and dangerous that, to guard it, the Nazis have revived the sentence of death by beheading."

The theory is that Chancellor Hitler begins to fear his own people, and seeks to keep them under, by terror.

Germany hates Russia's government, Russia hates Germany's government. Hitler represents protest against Communism, Stalin's power represents protest against capitalism. Nevertheless, Russia and Germany have entered into a trade agreement which will amount to one hundred million dollars on each side.

A most interesting paragraph in the Supreme Court's gold decision, sound and enlightening, upholds the government's cancellation of gold payment contracts because "private parties and states and municipalities" cannot make and enforce contracts which may limit the constitutional authority of Congress.

The Supreme Court divided five to four, rather narrow. Justices Stone, Brandeis, Roberts and Cardozo agreed with Chief Justice Hughes in supporting the government.

The speech made by Justice McReynolds, attacking the decision of the five justices that supported President Roosevelt in the gold issue, shows that there must have been some very earnest discussion before the court divided five to four. Justice McReynolds, from Tennessee, seventy-three years old, compared the Roosevelt administration with Nero, who undertook to use a debased currency. The justice said the Constitution had "gone," and he and the three other dissenting justices felt "shame and humiliation."

The British are thinking "quite seriously" about bringing suit against the United States government to compel payment of United States bonds in gold metal. That would give the Britishers sixteen hundred and ninety dollars for every one thousand dollar gold bond. The French, it is said, have decided to "refrain from further effort to collect payment in gold on United States obligations."

The French seem wise and the British foolish, considering what success Uncle Sam has had in trying to collect ten thousand million dollars in any kind of money.

By the way, suppose the United States had been tied up in the World Court when that

"CODES VITAL"—ROOSEVELT

By Associated Press

Washington, Feb. 20—A Presidential message recommending a two-year extension of NRA with fundamental principles renewed met a Senatorial determination today to investigate the recovery law's vast code structure.

"The fundamental purposes and principles of the act are sound," the President told Congress. "To abandon them is unthinkable. It would spell the return of industrial and labor chaos."

The long-awaited message on this key new deal agency, whose spectacular flight so long was headed by dynamic Hugh S. Johnson, was read to an expectant Congress shortly after the Senate finance committee approved a resolution to investigate NRA.

Chairman Harrison said the inquiry asked by Senators Nye (R.), North Dakota and McCarran (D.), Nevada, would begin at once in preparation for framing the new NRA law.

4,000,000 Jobs

Naming the recovery administration as "the biggest factor in giving re-employment to aproximately 4,000,000 people." Mr. Roosevelt stressed these essentials for continuation:

Federal establishment of minimum fair trade practices and labor relation standards; continued fixing of minimum wages and maximum hours and protection for employes "freely to organize" for collective bargaining.

Child labor should be outlawed as would be private price-fixing.

Mr. Roosevelt said the way to obtain code enforcement was "not to seek to put people in jail."

His own view, elaborated at a press conference, was to prevent what Johnson called "chiselers" from doing damage, before it occurred, through quick court action.

His message urged "more adequate" application of the anti-trust laws' fundamental principles, but left the method to Congress.

There was some confusion as to whether the President's message recommended extension also of the second title of the recovery law—that setting up the Public Works Administration.

Informed sources said the PWA was taken care of in the pending 4880 million-dollar relief bill, while the oil administration came under the NRA title of the law.

KIDNAP of Gulesian FEARED

WIDE HUNT FOR WEALTHY MAN

Seen Him?

Have you seen Moses H. Gulesian?

He is 71 years old;

Five feet, seven inches tall;

Has a dark complexion;

Was wearing a black overcoat, black and white scarf; black hat; navy blue suit and gray spats.

Moses H. Gulesian, 71, wealthy realtor and art patron, was reported missing today — a possible kidnap victim within 100 yards of police headquarters.

He vanished after he left a banquet in the University Club last night.

On orders from Washington, Department of Justice agents stepped into the intensive hunt.

State detectives, county and city law enforcement agents were called in through radio and teletype.

Police learned from Mrs. Gulesian that the missing man was armed with a revolver at the time he vanished.

Relatives conducted a quiet search until 4 o'clock this morning and then reported the disappearance at the Back Bay police station.

Belief that the one-time millionaire and still wealthy realtor might have been kidnaped was expressed by James L. Beck of 11 Read court, Newton Center, Gulesian's son-in-law. Beck said:

"I can't conceive of anything else.

"He didn't smoke. He didn't drink. I doubt any amnesia theory. And he was in splendid spirits when he left the banquet last night, friends told me."

U. S. OPENS Drive on Back TAXES HERE

Internal revenue agents opened a surprise "crack down" on Boston's delinquent taxpayers today.

More than 40 special agents and deputy collectors set out on the trail of at least 1400 big accounts.

Business men, business firms, professional men and racketeers are included in the list.

It is the first move of a country-wide drive to recover more than $50,000,000 that is lost annually, according to U. S. Treasury estimates.

Thomas B. Hassett, acting collector of internal revenue here, said, as soon as the rush is over, he will continue to use the force in running down all delinquents.

NEW JURY Sworn; Geogan TRIAL GOES ON

Plymouth, Feb. 20—Fifteen minutes after a mistrial was granted Vincent Michael Geogan of Boston charged with the robbery October 16 of $12,742 from the Brockton city treasurer's office, a new jury was sworn in here today.

The mistrial was granted by Judge Frank J. Donahue after the defense showed that two members of the first jury were special policemen.

Court resumed immediately with Assistant District Attorney George W. Arbuckle re-stating his charges. City Engineer L. Guy Levering of Brockton again testified.

6 Governor and council oust J. Paul Keefe, Ely campaign manager, from state armory commission job. Replaced by John F. Cahill.

Governor Curley today nominated Eugene M. McSweeney to be the new crime-war police commissioner of Boston.

McSweeney's nomination as the successor to Joseph J. Leonard, who last night tendered his resignation under fire, was submitted to the executive council at noon.

At the same time the Governor notified the council that Eugene C. Hultman, Leonard's predecessor as police commissioner, is "an unsuitable person" to hold his present state jobs as chairman of the Metropolitan District Commission and the Metropolitan Water Commission.

The governor informed the council that at 11 a. m., March 6—two weeks from today—he will hold a hearing on the Hultman ouster.

Suspension of the executive council rules for an immediate confirmation vote on McSweeney's appointment was requested by Governor Curley.

The council was [illegible] session late today and the [illegible]cated that he would [illegible] meeting Saturday if [illegible] is not immediately [illegible].

Big Shakeup Due

The governor's determination to rid Boston of organized crime, gambling and vice dens, is expected to find expression in a history-making shakeup of the Boston police department under the new commissioner.

There was a report that John J. Donovan, Boston attorney and newspaperman, would be McSweeney's choice for legal advisor to the department.

plans were definitely shaped for the removal of former commissioner Hultman.

The governor conferred with his special counsel, John P. Feeney and Francis R. Mullin, whose investigation of police is said by the governor to have disclosed shocking conditions under the Hultman regime.

Hultmann ignored Governor Curley's suggestion that he resign.

Mayor May Aid Him

His attitude of silence was coupled, however, with a strong report that Mayor Mansfield intended to find him a city position and remove him from the fire of the Governor's heavy artillery.

Again indicating that Hultman, much more than Leonard, was to blame for what he described as a "shocking underworld police allliance" in Boston, the Governor said he would be glad to assist the retiring commissioner in any way that he can.

He denied he had received Leonard's wife on a secret visit to his home, and said, also, that he had held no consultation with anyone with reference to another post for Leonard.

But he added:

"Personally I have nothing but a kindly feeling for Mr. Leonard, and if he should be desirous of my helping him in some way that I can, I'll be very glad to do so."

There was also a report that Leonard might be slated for a city job under Mansfield, but he said he intended returning to private law practice after a rest.

Some of his friends said he might seek vindication by running for mayor in 1937.

Commissioner Leonard's resignation under fire put an end to his announced plans for a department reorganization of his own and threw cold water on the hopes of five lieutenants seeking three captaincies.

He went to his headquarters office today and granted newspaper men a swan-song interview, during which he said:

"I am sorry that I'm going. I'd like to stay, but I guess I can't. We must consider the morale of the department and perhaps it's best that it ends this way.

"I'm going to take a rest and then return to private practice. My health hasn't been as good as it should be, and I feel that to take a rest is almost compulsory.

"This has tired me and tired Mrs. Leonard. We will go away together."

With the resignation of Police Commissioner Joseph C. Leonard, Governor Curley's score today was one down and two to go. He openly is gunning for Eugene C. Missing Realtor Gulesian Had Gun, Wife Reveals

Warner, socialite, pianist and composer, refused to believe that her husband had been kidnaped. At the Gulesian home, Commonwealth avenue, Newton, she directed the search among friends and relatives in the belief that he might have lost his memory.

She scouted also any theory of suicide and said he surely would have shot anyone who might attempt to kidnap him. She said:

"Of course, my husband had been worried considerably over financial affairs, but I am sure that he would not commit suicide.

"It is my opinion that his mind has snapped, that he is wandering around somewhere and that he may have taken a train to New York.

"I do not believe that he is kidnaped, because in that event someone would be dead by now.

"I am sure, at least, there would have been a shooting. He always carried a gun with him and he had the gun last night.

"Quick on Trigger"

"He was quick on the trigger and often said he would not hesitate to shoot if anybody bothered him. He even kept the gun under his pillow at night.

"In New York, he has a friend named Stuart K. Brandon. We intend to inquire there.

"We were an ideally happy couple, and I am certain that if he had planned to go away that he would take me. He never remained over night away from home without me.

"Just before he left at 6 o'clock he had sat at the piano with me while I played a new piece I had just written.

"I learned that he didn't wait for the party to finish; that he excused himself and said he was going home. He was at the dinner with Gilbert Brown of Brookline, Dr. William R. Chenery and John B. Allen, who lives at the club.

"There never was a bit of trouble between us. We had no quarrel. He was happy when he left, and he suggested that I wait up for him to return."

At the office of District Attorney Warren L. Bishop, however, it was announced that a state detective and two county detectives had been ordered to the case because of Mrs. Gulesian's fear of kidnaping.

State Detective Edward P. O'Neill and Investtigators Charles Jackson and Neil Doherty of the district attorney's office were assigned.

Boston police organized a special squad to search all hotels. A similar search of private dwellings was conducted by Newton police.

Gulesian has been threatened with kidnaping several times within the past two years.

Only a year ago he told a Middlesex grand jury of the threats.

Gulesian's locked automobile was found in Trinity place, Back Bay, a short distance from the University Club. He had parked it there to attend the banquet of the Sons of the American Revolution, of which he is an honorary member.

Attaches of the club said the elderly man left there about 9:30 last night. He waved good-bye to friends and shouted:

"See you all at the banquet next year."

Has Gun Permit

His disappearance was not known to Beck until Mrs. Gulesian called him by telephone early this morning. Beck drove immediately to the Newton home where the couple lived alone.

Beck reported that although he had many thousands of dollars tied up in real estate and was living in comparatively straightened circumstances at the palatial Gulesian home on Commonwealth avenue, Chestnut Hill, he was not despondent.

He added that his financial outlook was becoming increasingly bright.

Several years ago, a declining real estate market caught Gulesian. Most of his wealth was either swept away or tied up in law suits. At one time he declared that he and his wife were living on five dollars a week.

He came to this country an immigrant and soon laid the groundwork of his fortune in real estate. He was a pioneer in the movement which inaugurated the first "white way" in Massachusetts by illuminating Huntington avenue.

He built the old St. James Theater next to Horticultural Hall and improved the property now housing the Y. D. Club at 200 Huntington avenue.

LEONARD Talked of FOR MAYOR

A movement was started today by friends of Joseph J. Leonard, retiring police commissioner, to launch him as a candidate for next mayor of Boston.

A group will call at his home tonight in an effort to persuade him to run on a "vindication" ticket.

Mrs. Leonard, it was learned, however, is of opinion that before he takes any action he should consult former Governor Joseph B. Ely.

A phone call to her home today brought the information that she was "resting" and could not talk to newspapermen.

KEEFE Ousted; Cahill GETS JOB

Governor Curley, with the quick consent of the council, today ousted J. Paul Keefe from his post as secretary of the state armory commission.

John F. Cahill, of Everett, choice of the governor, was confirmed by the council under suspension of rules.

The governor said Adjutant-General William R. Rose had reported Keefe's work "entirely unsatisfactory" and that he had not been on the job a single day.

14 MORE Named by CURLEY

2 NEW HOSPITAL TRUSTEES

Fourteen appointments submitted by Governor Curley to the council today were featured by changes in the personnel of the Massachusetts General hospital board of trustees.

The governor nominated Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant and economist, to replace Andrew J. Peters, former mayor.

He nominated Joseph A. Tomasello, Boston contractor, to replace Edwin S. Webster.

For the trustee position left vacant by the death of Joseph H. O'Neil, yesterday, the governor named Henry V. Morgan. He reappointed Betty Dumain of Groton, to the board.

Post for Mullin

He also appointed Francis R. Mullin as special state agent to prosecute state claims against the federal government, totaling approximately $48,000,000.

The claims are based upon taxes collected by the federal government from many sources, principally manufactured goods, which the state claims should have been collected by and paid to the state.

Mullin would be given $500 a year expenses and would collect as fee 5 per cent of the amount his efforts gained for the state treasury. The Governor explained that most agents are paid 10 per cent.

One such state agent in the past, a J. B. Cotton, received a commission of $161,474 for collecting for Massachusetts in excess of $1,600,000 from the federal government on claims arising from the Civil War.

Other appointments submitted were:

Clerk of Brighton municipal court, Daniel F. Cunningham, of Boston, reappointed.

Trustee of Medfield State Hospital, Eva M. Watson, Boston, reappointed.

Public administrator, Charles J. O'Connor of Northampton, in place of Charles E. Chase.

Associate medical examiner, Hubert R. Toombs, Westfield, in place of Robert D. Hildreth.

Trustee, Belchertown State school, Bessie F. Dewey, Northampton, in place of Frances E. Cheney.

Trustee, Wrentham State school, Warren J. Swett, Canton reappointed.

Trustee, Boston State hospital, Edna W. Dreyfus, Brookline, reappointed.

Trustee, Grafton State hospital, Rose Herbert, Worcester, reappointed.

WOMAN JAILED In Welfare Fraud

Mrs. Emma Salhaney, 42, of Hudson street, South End, was committed to jail today by Judge Thomas H. Dowd in municipal court for failure to pay back $3816 allegedly received illegally from the Boston welfare department.

Mrs. Salhaney was placed on probation with a six months' suspended sentence last April, with the provision that she make restitution. Special Officer Ernest Fanjoy testified today that she had transferred $2000 she had in a bank when she was receiving aid, to a relative.

Tells of Post-Suit Tryst

MRS. FLORENCE E. "BETTY" WALLACE

Punched in the Stomach, Says She

Returned After Filing Suit, Beat Her, Says Mrs. Wallace

Her husband filed suit for divorce and then came to her home last November and spent the night with her, Mrs. Florence E. "Betty" Wallace testified today in Middlesex probate court.

Even that time her husband, William Wallace, Jr., beat her, she said.

She testified that just a month earlier he had been arrested because he left her covered with black and blue marks, a bruised stomach and a swollen wrist.

Mrs. Wallace also told of a boating party last summer.

"Mr. Wallace was driving the boat toward the Wollaston Yacht Club," she testified. "The tide was low and I saw that he was not in the channel. A Mrs. Putnam and a girl named Marie were with us.

"I tried to point out the danger of running aground. He paid no attention to me. Fearing that we would be marooned for some time if we ran aground, I tried to grab the wheel from him.

"He smashed me in the face with his fist, and then proceeded to generally punch me about with both hands.

"When we got to the dock, I got into my car and left. My nose was bleeding badly. Mr. Wallace did not come home at all that night. The next morning both my eyes were discolored and nearly closed."

Nights away from home were not infrequent for her husband, Mrs. Wallace said.

According to her testimony, he was in the habit of telephoning persons to meet him at the corner. Then he would go out and fail to return. She said that she became curious about these calls.

"One night he was very drunk. He went to the phone and made a corner date. I heard him say that he hoped the next time they could sleep together without being disturbed.

"I also heard a woman's voice on the other end. I took the receiver away from him and hung up on her. He didn't come home that night."

Of Richard E. Mandel, who asserted that he saw her in an unconventional pose with Otis Slocum, one of the men mentioned in her husband's charges, she said he was just "a disturber and a troublemaker."

She denied emphatically that she had ever been alone with Edward Slocum or with Edward Russell, another of the co-respondents.

LYNN STRIKERS Again Walk Out

Less than 24 hours after the union joint council signed a peace pact with the Gold Seal Shoe Co., of Lynn, shoe cutters and lasters today again walked out, throwing 1400 employes once more on the street.

Spokesmen for the cutters and lasters declared they were not satisfied with the terms of the agreement. The stitchers' union, however, last night ratified the pact.

gold decision was rendered? Do you think the World Court would have failed to take up the decision, and tell the United States what it ought to do about its own money and bonds?

Senator Wagner thinks the President should not be allowed to pay only $50 a month to workers; he should pay highest union wages, ten, fifteen and more dollars a day. Does Senator Wagner realize that the money for emergency employment is taken out of the pockets of taxpayers and that it is more important to pay fifty dollars a month to a great number idle, than pay three or four hundred dollars a month to a chosen few?

When those that have money left, are taxed for those that have none, that is charity, however you disguise it. Charity should be managed for the benefit of the greatest number.

Will Rogers, who writes for newspapers, sometimes travels on the ground in strange regions where the middle of the road sticks up and wheel tracks are deep. He wants automobile makers to produce a car with "greater clearance."

There is nothing complicated about obliging Mr. Rogers. Simply make optional, as equipment, wheels two feet greater in diameter than the ordinary wheel. That would clear everything, almost. Better still, take a road scraper and scrape the roads that stick up in the middle. Make work for the unemployed.

Thrills A-Plenty In Ice-Cake Voyaging—But Police Say No!

It's exciting sport these South Boston youngsters are enjoying in harbor waters near Columbia road and H street. But their ice-floe rafts are treacherous, and, even as the five adventurous voyagers paddle lustily on their way, police in a cruising car are arriving to put an end to the dangerous fun.

COLE Signs Dog PERMITS

DISREGARDS PROTEST WAVE

City Councillors Kerrigan and Donovan of South Boston today launched a drive against a dog track in South Boston on the ground that Chapter 271, Section 33, general laws, forbids laying out a race track without consent of municipal authorities.

In the face of a wave of protests, General Charles H. Cole, racing commission chairman, today signed the permits for dog tracks in South Boston, Cambridge and Methuen.

Reorganization of the racing commission by the governor was a predicted outcome of his action.

Commissioners Ensign and O'Connor had previously signed the permits.

Cole added his signature in the face of several hundred complaints filed wtih the commission.

He and the other members then left for Springfield to hold a hearing on a proposed track permit in West Springfield.

City officials and prominent clergymen accused the commission of having "put something over" by granting the licenses without giving protestants a hearing.

Disregard of public interest was alleged, and it was expected the fight would be carried to the Governor with a demand that he take corrective measures.

Delay Looked For

The commission may be forced to reconsider its action and the building of the dog tracks may be indefinitely delayed.

Still unsettled was the showdown between General Cole, commission chairman, and the governor, over the latter's demand that Lawrence J. Bresnahan, of Medway, be removed as assistant secretary to the commission.

There was a report that Bresnahan would resign to save Cole in this situation.

Work on the Cambridge dog plant of the Bay State Greyhound Association, Inc., licensed for racing May 18 to July 2, was to have begun on the Alewife Brooks parkway site within 10 days but the Cambridge protest today indicated at least a delay.

Will Ask Hearing

Acting Mayor John W. Lyons, on the heels of the unanimous vote of the city council condemning the track license, said he would demand a hearing before the commission.

Even more pronounced in his views of the commission's action was Rev. Dr. Francis V. Murphy, pastor of St. Peter's Church, near the site licensed for the track. He said:

"The upper crust of Hamilton and Framingham and the underworld of Ward 5, Boston, get together to put such laws on our books. But you will notice there are no tracks in Framingham or Hamilton.

"My first protest is a general one against dog racing anywhere and legalized betting. Secondly, I am against it being in Cambridge so near the City Home for Aged and Infirm and the Tuberculosis Hospital.

"Put Over"

"It was put over on us without any notice. What does General Cole know about the site?"

South Boston clergy were practically unanimous in their objection to the site chosen for the track of the Old Harbor Kennel Club, Inc., at Old Colony avenue and Ralston street.

The commission has decreed racing there from July 3 to August 14, and from October 1 to October 12.

There again, the principal complaint was based upon the failure of the commission to hold any hearing.

The pastors of St. Monica's Church, and of St. Brigid's, Rev. Michael E. Doherty and Rev. Patrick J. Waters, respectively, said they feared the moral consequences of racing off Old Colony boulevard, near Mile road.

They were joined in protest by the South Boston Citizens' Association, the South Boston Civic Association and other organizations.

Chief of Police Joseph R. Hutchinson of Methuen and the Rev. William B. Sharpe, head of the Christian League, a ministers' society, both stood opposed to racing in their town.

The Civil Service Commission at Washington announced today open competitive examinations for postmasters first class, in Boston, and North Attleboro. Examinations will be the week of March 25.

Hollywood's Latest Gossip Is Brought to You Daily by Louella O. Parsons

This Is Life
ROBERT E. ROGERS

Now that the Hauptmann case and the Supreme Court decision on gold and the Constitution no longer monopolize the front pages (and, indeed, many of the others) of our newspapers, there is leisure to speak and think of pleasanter things.

If not shoes and ships and sealing wax, cabbages and kings, at least the good plays that Boston is enjoying, the better films and music, and the like.

Prof. Rogers

I went to see "Dodsworth" the other evening, Sydney Howard's brisk and successful dramatization of Sinclair Lewis' rather diffuse and not altogether successful novel about the retired automobile magnate and his wife and their European experiences.

It is clear enough today that most moving picture addicts do not really care for or understand the legitimate drama. It is too talky for them, too diffuse, too lacking in the quick variety of the films.

An act 30 minutes long—"scene individible or poem unlimited"—taxes their patience and attention unduly, particularly without the canned musical accompaniment.

To these people let me say emphatically that "Dodsworth" is as good fun as any talking picture you ever saw and, in addition, more intelligent than most.

Sydney Howard has not only solved the problem of making a play out of a novel—a dreadful task—but he has solved the problem of adapting the film technic to the theater—an even more dreadful task.

What Stage Needs

"Dodsworth" seems to me a beautiful example of what the stage play of the future must be like if the stage is to survive. It moves like chain lightning.

Dialogue and action are rapid, brisk, clear cut and decisive. There are some fifteen short scenes, none of them over ten minutes long. Scenes change in the dark, soundlessly, magically, almost instantaneously. And all the scenes are, so to speak, in technicolor and beautifully designed and lighted.

The theme is so characteristically American that all around you in the audience you can hear your neighbors explaining the piece to one another in terms of Mr. and Mrs. Whoosiz who live just around the corner in Belmont or Newtonville.

People guess at what is coming, pass judgment on the characters, all but hiss the lovely and discontented wife who determines to LIVE in the continental fashion after 20 years in the Zenith automobile business, and who loses her virtue, her peace, and her husband in the process. Fay Bainter does an admirable job at that.

Mr. Huston, as the motor magnate who finds that there is no future in America for a retired business man but an infinite future of exciting possibilities in Europe with the right woman—played exquisitely by Nan Sunderland—is as American as the underwear he displays so casually to a tittering audience, while his wife makes a sight of herself with the nocturnal cold cream.

Best Scene Missing

Indeed, there are moments when a spectator with a long film memory has a dim sense that he is watching Abraham Lincoln being quietly and tenderly concerned over the irrational conduct of Mary Todd. That is because Dodsworth is any American and Lincoln was the American.

One misses Lewis' best scene, in which Dodsworth and his best friend's wife, Matey, conduct an unselfconscious conference in the bathroom while husband Tubby sleeps off a joyous Parisian binge in the bedroom of a Ritz apartment. But that is only one example of how Sydney Howard ruthlessly excises pleasant but inessential anecdotes while hewing straight to the line that makes a logical and integrated play. As a dramatization of a novel it is superb.

Elsie Robinson would enjoy seeing how a pretentious and artificial woman is peeled down, layer by layer, like an onion, only to discover for herself that there isn't even a kernel left.

Blessed in the belief that she is a dangerous heartbreaker, she is told in her first flirtation that she is only an amateur and a poor sport at that.

She tries to eat her cake and have it, too, and loses both lover and husband. Confident of her youth and freshness, she is told bluntly that she is too old to marry a youngster. Finally, falling back on her husband, she loses him at the last moment to the kind of woman whom all Babbitts dream about but only Dodsworth achieves.

And going up the aisle at the end the suburban audiences break into excited whispers again about the Whoosiz, whose last summer's European trip wasn't such a success, either. It's a grand American play!

BRUNO Counsel at PEACE

REILLY, FISHER "MAKE UP"

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 20—The dove of peace—strangely lacking in the Bruno Hauptmann defense staff—settled today on the battling attorneys who were fighting with each other while they were battling for Hauptmann's life.

From New York came word from Chief Defense Attorney Edward J. Reilly that he would join in Hauptmann's fight for an appeal.

From Flemington came word from C. Lloyd Fisher, Hauptmann's attorney-friend, that "everything had been ironed out" and that he welcomed Reilly's presence in the legal battle.

The peace-maker, it appeared, was Egbert Rosecrans who played a more or less minor role in the sensational Flemington trial. After a conference with Reilly, Rosecrans said:

"All of us are in this case and nobody can get out now. This is not time nor place for a disagreement among counsel with a man's life at stake."

While all this was going on, Mrs. Anna Hauptmann paid her first visit to her condemned husband since he entered the death house here.

"Richard does not want there should be more trouble among his lawyers. He wants everything should go ahead and fix it for him to be free soon."

Fisher obtained a writ of error yesterday which postpones Hauptmann's execution at least to October.

Hauptmann himself is confident he will be out of the death house by Easter.

In spite of the fact that he has but one hope, the court of errors and appeals, his guards declare he is cheerful and constantly mentions to other death house inmates his faith in ultimate freedom.

Governor Harold G. Hoffman has received 124 letters containg pleas for a new trial or commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment.

Seven letters contained praise of the state's prosecution of the case, and in two letters the writers told the executive they had dreams that proved Hauptmann's innocence.

Many of the writers presented deep and involved arguments and asserted the majority of the people in their neighborhood thought this or that.

GUARDS Here to Protect PRESIDENT

Advance guards of the United Secret Service men who will guard President Roosevelt on his visit here, were established in Cambridge today.

The President is to be guest of the Fly Club of Harvard at its winter dinner on Saturday. The President is expected to arrive at about 7 p. m. and to stay but a few hours.

Both Harvard yard police and Cambridge authorities have been in conference with the federal men to perfect details for guarding the chief executive. There were rumors that the President would be serenaded by the Lowell House carillon, but they couldn't be confirmed.

A year ago some Harvard wit asked the President if it would be all right to name the bells after him. The President declined the honor, and then it was learned that the request was a hoax.

FIND BODY Of Missing Official

Providence, R. I., Feb. 20 (AP)—The body of Crawford L. Estabrooks, 86, former Bristol town official, who had been missing since Dec. 23, was found, face downward, this morning by an ERA worker in marshland near the Colt drive, Bristol. The body was almost entirely covered with ice and snow.

The man wandered from his house, two days before Christmas, and a search for him by scores of persons failed.

2 DOGS KILLED By Rifle Shots

Two dogs found dead in Quincy streets yesterday were killed by bullets from a .32 calibre rifle, examinations showed today.

One dog, an Irish terrier owned by Mrs. Louise Marini of West street, Quincy, was found on that street and the other, owner unknown, was found on Loring street.

Max to Wed—But Whom?

MARY KIRK BROWN MAX BAER

Max Baer says he's going to get married again—but he won't say who the girl is. He does say that he never has had his picture taken with his bride-to-be—so that eliminates Mary Kirk Brown, New York society girl, shown with the Maxie.

Carole Lombard frequently has been mentioned with the love life of the heavyweight champion, but Maxie says his bride-to-be is an Eastern society girl. That, it seems, would eliminate the glamorous Carole despite all her charm and appeal.

MAX BAER JUNE KNIGHT HYMAN BUSHEL

This touching scene was photographed when Maxie greeted June Knight, another actress. By all appearances, Maxie means what he's doing. By some strange quirk of fate, June's lawyer, Hyman Bushel, was on hand to witness the scene.

MYRNA LOY MAX BAER

When Maxie appeared in pictures with Myrna Loy as his leading lady, there were, of course, the usual number of rumors linking their names in a romantic manner. But both the champ and the actress have denied they were "that way."

ALYCE To See Other VICTIM

MEETS BOY WHO HAD SAME ILL

Fall River, Feb. 20—The stage—which in this case happens to be a hospital room—was all set today for a meeting between Alyce Jane McHenry and little Armand Martel.

Her scheduled visitor, a four-year-old Fall River boy, is a veteran of a similar operation, and he's in the best of health now.

Hospital authorities thought it would be a good idea, sort of a morale-booster, for Alyce to see the little fellow who had the same trouble as she.

Naturally the Nebraska girl was excited over the prospect. Doctors had but one fear—that she would get too excited before the actual meeting and in her weakened condition might suffer instead of benefit.

But they were all planning anyhow. That was half the fun of it.

The little girl's room, a big sunny one on the third floor of the hospital, was perfumed by the scent of a hundred flowers today.

Persons from all over Fall River were sending in bouquets that ran from expensive roses to modest violets.

More "Pictures"

Today Alyce was also wheeled out of her flower-filled room for more "picture taking." That's the way she described the X-ray and fleuroscopic examinations that were made by Dr. George C. King, in charge of the hospital's pediatrics department.

He is in charge of Alyce until she is entrusted to the care of Dr. Philemon E. Truesdale, the surgeon now on his way from the West Indies to perform her operation.

The picture-taking was not new to the little girl.

"I've been through all that at home," she said. "It takes a few hours, but it does not bother me."

Between times, Alyce was busy catching up with her correspondence. She promised to write to her father every day, and that's just what's she's doing. He lives in Sioux City, Ia.

Alyce was relieved to get rid of that ice cream diet at last, too.

She's having a much better time with cereals, apple sauce and custards. She has hopes of even getting something more substantial if all goes well.

The Martel boy, who was operated on by Dr. George W. Blood at the Fall River General Hospital, was found by the Boston Evening American.

The upside down stomach condition is one of the medical world rarities.

FAME DIES Fliers in Toils

New York, Feb. 20 (INS)—Such is fame:

A jury in Federal Judge Mortimer W. Byers' court in Brooklyn was asked if it had ever heard of Joseph and Benjamin Adamowicz, two of five defendants charged with operating an unregistered still.

Every member of the jury shook his head negatively.

Joseph, 49, and Bejamin, 36, are the brothers who not so long ago made a transatlantic flight to Poland.

To Discuss 'Our Operation'

ARMAND MARTEL MRS. EVA MARTEL

"Nothing to it, Alyce," little Armand Martel, shown with his mother, Mrs. Eva Martel of Fall River, will tell 10-year-old Alyce Jane McHenry today at the hospital where Alyce is awaiting an operation to make normal her "upside down" stomach. A similar operation made Armand the healthy boy he is at present.

Legion Post Swears War Against Reds

Pledged to uproot Communism, Dr. Frederick J. Gillis was first commander of the youngest American Legion post today.

The organization, the Joyce Kilmer Post, which received its charter Saturday, is composed entirely of school teachers who served in the World War and who are sworn to battle the doctrines of the Reds.

Dr. Gillis, professor at Boston Teachers' College, served overseas in the army and was twice wounded. He is married, father of six children and lives in Rustic road, West Roxbury.

In taking over office, Dr. Gillis declared that he would uphold the platform of the national Legion convention of 1934, and would:

"Promote an intellectual Americanism among the children in our charge."

William J. Carey of Brighton high school was chosen first vice-commander; Leo H. Grueter, High School of Commerce, second vice-commander; Patrick J. Geary Abraham Lincoln school, third vice-commander.

VASSAR Girls in Red PROTEST

VERBAL SPANK ENDS MARCH

By Universal Service

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 20—A verbal spanking was what 100 Vassar and Skidmore college girls got in this city.

They marched upon the Capitol yesterday and demanded a public hearing on the Nunan Bill requiring college students to take an oath of loyalty to the government.

A scathing reprimand was delivered the group by Miss Lucille Nichols, a district superintendent of schools in New York, who warned the college girls that they were being "misled."

Dr. Edward Mandel, associate superintendent of schools in New York city, said:

"It is a sad thing that such fine upstanding girls should be mistaken on the purposes of the bill. It is fundamental that we owe allegiance to our government. If we expect benefits we must accept responsibilities."

Mrs. May Healy, a member of the joint committee of teachers' organizations, said the taxpayers have a right to demand loyalty of students they are supporting. She said a majority of teachers in the state favor the Ives law requiring a similar oath from them.

Leading the group, which argued the bill is a threat against "academic freedom," were Kathleen McInerny of South Bend, Ind., and Betty Welt, of Detroit, Vassar girls.

DOCTOR Plays Part as FATHER DIES

No seasoned showman with the code of the calling a part of his life, nevertheless Dr. John A. Foley of Dorchester stood forth today as a seasoned trouper living up to the motto, "The show must go on."

His heart was saddened by the death of his father, James T. Foley of Roseclair street, Dorchester, but the doctor had promised to be interlocutor for the Boston City Hospital minstrel show. He didn't quit.

As the body lay in the casket, but a few miles away, Dr. Foley went through his performance, "bringing down the house." Afterwards, tears dimming his eyes, he said:

"I know dad wouldn't have wanted me to let them down. After all the children's ward will be happy for the money we've raised."

New York Teachers Get Red Warning

By Universal Service

New York, Feb. 20—Any effort to create communists among students in the New York public school system will be met determinedly, Dr. George J. Ryan, president of the board of education, said today.

Dr. Ryan, a close observer of the fight made by the Hearst newspapers on un-American influences in education, said:

"It is one thing to apprise students of what Communism or any other political philosophy may be. As a matter of education, so to inform students is quite proper.

"But it is another thing to attempt to indoctrinate Communism in students, to try to make Communists of them in the schools. That cannot be permitted."

Dr. Ryan recited that some months ago he instructed the board of examiners, as to candidates for teaching places:

"Let us close the door against anyone seeking a teaching position for the purpose of teaching un-American or subversive doctrines. You might very well serve notice now on all who would be candidates that loyalty to the country whose children they would teach is a fundamental eligibility requirement.

"The state requires teachers to take an oath of loyalty. I do not believe that anyone should be a teacher who takes this oath simply because it is required.

"Let us, rather, have teachers who deem it an honor and a privilege to pledge allegiance to the state they serve. No one is a person of good character who enlists in the service of the state and then withholds his loyalty from the state."

TRUNK CRIME Remains Mystery

Brighton, Eng., Feb. 20 (AP)—A coroner's jury today wrote an official "finis" on "Brighton trunk crime No. 1" by returning an open verdict on one of England's most baffling murder mysteries.

The jury found it was unable to reach any conclusion on the wealth of the woman whose torso was found last June in a trunk at the Brighton railway station.

"BOSSY" GILLIS Protests Alone

Former Mayor Andrew J. "Bossy" Gillis appeared before the legislative committee on highways in lone opposition to the Newburyport Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis, Grange, and Veteran groups.

To name a new section of the turnpike for General Adolphus W. Greely would be an insult to the general, he maintained.

Lose Everything But Lives as Fire Destroys Home

Coolness and courage of 11-year-old Anna Seery saved five lives today when fire destroyed the Seery home at 22 Warren street, Norwood. She awakened her father and mother and helped them lower two smaller children through a second story window. Shown with her is her brother, Paul, three.

Thankful that all members of her family escaped death in a fire which destroyed her home today, Mrs. Joseph M. Seery of Warren street, Norwood, is worried, nevertheless about the future. The fire left her husband and herself destitute, she says.

LIVES IN FIRE

Trapped by flames, five members of a Norwood family jumped for their lives today from their blazing home at 22 Warren street.

The mother, Mrs. Joseph Seery, with her baby Paul, three, in her arms, leaped first. Then the father, lowering his daughter, Anna, and her two brothers, Joseph, seven, and Paul, two, jumped himself.

Scantily clad, the family made its way through the snow to a neighbor's as the fire completely destroyed their home.

The fire was discovered by the eldest daughter, Anna, who awakened the others. Blocked from the stairs by the flames, the father flung open a window and assisted the others to safety.

KENNAMER
Case Goes to JURY TODAY

By International News Service

Courtroom, Pawnee, Okla., Feb. 20—With two rich Tulsa youths under technical arrest in connection with the investigation of the bizarre death of young Sidney Born, arguments to the 12 jurors who hold the fate of Phil Kennamer opened today.

Tom Wallace, veteran lawyer of the Southwest, opened the arguments for the state.

The little white-washed courtroom was packed, and buzzed with excitement when it was learned the two youths under technical arrest had been told by Tulsa criminal investigators to stay in their hotel, remaining from all places in Pawnee except the courtroom, and to show up in Tulsa immediately at the completion of the trial for further questioning in connection with the mysterious death of Born.

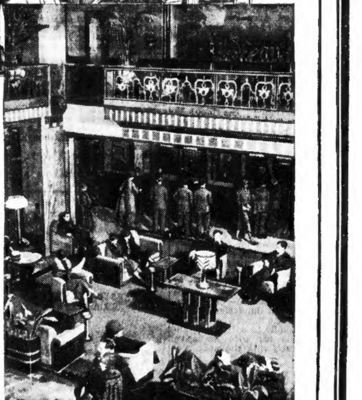
HOWE'S TAVERN



From colonial tavern to modern hotel

Said shrewd old Doctor Johnson, "There is nothing which has yet been contrived by man by which so much happiness has been produced as a good tavern or inn."

In 1784, when this bank opened its doors, the taverns of Boston were the center of social and political life. Indeed, the plans for the Revolution itself were plotted over steaming punch-bowls at The Green Dragon and Bunch of Grapes.

Today, Boston hotels could offer comfortable lodging to over one-half of the entire population of the city as it was in 1784. In the course of a year, over one million guests register at these modern descendants of old Boston taverns.

This bank, whose early records disclose frequent transactions with Boston's eighteenth century taverns, has kept abreast of the tremendous changes during its century and a half of existence. Today, as New England's largest banking institution, it stands ready to serve you with every modern banking facility.

TEACHERS TOLD TO BOOST TVA

(Editor's Note—This is the second of a series of articles disclosing the extent and effect of the propaganda with which government bureaus are flooding the nation.)

By Universal Service

Washington, Feb. 19—Even ADVOCATES of utility reform are beginning to have qualms about the propaganda methods used by the government in exploiting the Tennessee valley authority's power experiment.

Senator L. J. Dickinson, (R) of Iowa, recently charged this propaganda has been disseminated in the nation's schools. In an address before the Senate he declared:

"Every American school teacher, every American parent, every American taxpayer, will be gravely concerned to learn of this latest attempt to prostitute our public school system for the purpose of spreading the propaganda of a public-ownership doctrine by writers secretly subsidized out of federal moneys."

Senator Dickinson referred to publication of an article about the TVA in the journal of the National Education Association, distributed among the nation's teachers.

On Payroll

This article was written by Dr. Walter E. Myer, whom the TVA placed on its payroll while he was developing the material for his article at the scene of the power project.

Dr. Myer also wrote a laudatory piece on TVA for the Junior Review, a publication of which he is editor, and which is circulated among school children. The slogan of this publication is "From the Capital to the Class Room."

This led Senator Dickinson to exclaim:

"Thus is revealed an agency of the federal government engaging in a propaganda trick that amounts to a public fraud—a deception as black as any charged against its public utility opponents."

The senator, after quoting Dr. Myer's charges that the private utility interests have sought to insinuate their propaganda into school textbooks, declared:

"The irony is, of course, that such a self-righteous accusation should be contained in a similar attempt to influence the schools."

Quotes "Blurb"

Senator Dickinson quoted again from a "blurb" by Dr. Joy Elmer Morgan, of the National Education Association, accompanying the Myer article:

"By a piece of good fortune, arrangement was made for Walter E. Myer, editor, gifted writer and student, to prepare the story. Try it on your classes. Perhaps it will help the young people to realize that America has a great future if it wills to have such a future."

And Senator Dickinson concluded:

"I am not interested in whether we conitnue only private ownership of public utilities or private and public ownership, but I am interested in seeing that the public school system of this country shall not be subjected to undue influence on the part of either side by means of the type of propaganda they want to put out in order to further their own interests.

"How long," says Senator Dickinson, "has this sort of thing been going on?"

BONUS Backers Act TOMORROW

Washington, Feb. 20—Standing flatly against any compromise, beakers of the Patman 2100 million dollar bonus bill decided today upon two immediate steps to force action.

Both moves are planned for tomorrow. The first will seek to assure a House vote on the bill, even t hough it is not approved by the ways and means committee.

The second will attempt to permit the insertion of the Patman bill in an appropriation bill which provides salaries for representatives and senators.

Representative Patman (D.-Texas), declared that at noon tomorrow—the earliest possible moment under the rules—he would file a petition to take his bill out of the Ways and Means committee.

Patman's followers were chary of comment on the bonus bill introduced yesterday by Senator Tydings (D-Md.). But privately, they said they much preferred their method of issuing new currency to buy up adjusted compensation certificates at their face value.

MELLON Sold Stocks SHORT IN 1931

Pittsburgh, Feb. 20—Andrew W. Mellon's confidential secretary, Howard M. Johnson, told the Board of Tax Appeals today that his chief sold two blocks of stock "short" in 1931 while he was Secretary of the Treasury.

He made a profit on one and a loss on the other.

Johnson took the stand as a witness at the board's hearing on Mellon's petition for a refund of $139,000 for overpaid taxes in 1931. The government charges Mellon with fraud and claims he owes more than $3,000,000.

The witness said on direct examination that the two blocks Mellon sold consisted of 2500 shares of Westinghouse.

One was sold "short," he testified, in March, and "covered" in April or May. Mellon took a profit of $72,250 on the transaction, Johnson related, but lost $68,300 on the other deal, which he "covered by delivering to his broker stock from his own portfolio."

GLOUCESTER IN Rum Ship War

Gloucester, Feb. 20—A conectred drive to stop smuggling of alcohol into this port was launched today by Coast Guards and police.

The drive follows reports to federal agents that since the closing of Coast Guard Base No. 7 here on February 16, rum-runners have landed huge quantities of Belgian alcohol.

The rum-runners are said to be lying about 60 miles off here.

During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients, naming them Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the bowels, causing a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, take one or two of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets at night for a week and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets—now and then—to keep fit, 15c, 30c and 60c.

GOLD Legislation STUDIED

ROOSEVELT TO AWAIT ADVICE

By Associated Press

Washington, Feb. 20—President Roosevelt said today a decision on possible legislation to protect the government fully against any legal suits under the gold clause decisions would await thorough study by lawyers.

Obviously pleased by the Supere Court's ruling upholding the government's monetary program, Mr. Roosevelt, at his regular press conference, said it would be some time before it was determined whether further legislation is necessary.

The President denied published reports (not carried by the Associated Press) that a decision had been reached for gold legislation and also denied an inference that this question came up before the emergency council yesterday.

Mr. Roosevelt told newspapermen the only reference to gold at yesterday's meeting was his congratulations to Attorney-General Cummings and of his telling of the golf story of "Four down and five to go."

This story was not repeated by the President, but was believed to be the same one told today on Capitol Hill by Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), who said:

"The Attorney-General says that when he enters the Supreme Court to argue money, it is like starting a golf game 4 down and 5 to go.

"He is better off, however, than the citizen with a gold government bond. The ctzen s 18 up and no place to play."

Out of the Supreme Court's gold decision some officials and legislators today saw a possible issue emerging to resound in election campaigns.

Some wondered whether the future might not see holders of government bonds organinzed to carry to Congress a fight to be paid in the equivalent of the old gold dollars.

What will happen if a bondholder should go into the court of claims seeking to show he suffered actual loss in purchasing power as a result of the abrogation remains to be seen, in the opinion of many experts.

Two possible steps were suggested unofficially: Revision of the law to prohibit suits in the court of claims for additional payments on federal bonds; and exchange of old gold clause bonds for new securities that would not bear such a gold guarantee.

U. S. Dollar May Be Stabilized at 59.06

By Universal Service

Washington, Feb. 20—Possibility of early stabilization of the dollar at the present level of 59.06 cents, with a tendency to stabilize all prices, was understood to be under serious consideration by administration officials.

A succession of developments, it was said, was impelling President Roosevelt toward stabilization, the last and most powerful of them the Supreme Court opinions in the Liberty Bond gold clause case.

Fire on Destroyer

Fire caused by sparks from a riveting machine broke out today on the destroyer Monaghan, under construction at the navy yard. Workmen checked the flames.

ATTEMPT In Everett to KILL OFFICER

The attempted murder of Patrolman James J. O'Donnell, militant Everett vice raider, was revealed today.

O'Donnell was fired on as he neared his home, 48 Woodward street, Everett. A bullet whistled through his hat, narrowly missing his head.

He threw himself to the ground and drew his service revolver in time to see a large sedan roar out of a side street and disappear in the direction of Ferry street.

Although reluctant to talk, police attributed the murder try to Boston racketeers involved in the number pool and horse betting combine.

GLORIA 11 Years Old TODAY

New York, Feb. 20—Gloria Vanderbilt was 11 years old today.

The little heiress to a $4,000,000 fortune, over whose custody her mother, Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt, lost a bitter court battle, did not see her mother.

Mrs. Vanderbilt may see her daughter every week-end. Last week-end, however, the child stayed with her paternal aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, in whose custody the child spends her week days.

Next Saturday, when little Gloria arrives for her visit, her mother will stay home from her newly opened dress salon, and the two will be together all day.

DRIVE Plans for ROUND UP

Leaders of the Emergency Relief Campaign for 1935 today plunged into the work of completing plans for the "Round Up Week" of the drive, which will begin with a "Zero Hour Dinner" next Sunday.

The campaign collections, augmented by gifts of $85,909.94 from New England Telephone & Telegraph workers, rose to $2,681,559.38 today. The goal of the campaigners is four million dollars.

Fannie Hurst, the author, will be a guest at the "Zero Hour Dinner" to be held at Symphony Hall. Other figures, known in literary and theatrical worlds have also promised to attend.

CURLEY OUTLINES TEXTILE PLANS

To Save Industry

Governor Curley, in the following article written for the Boston Evening American, outlines his plans for savnig the textile industry in New England.

By GOVERNOR JAMES M. CURLEY

The good citizens of New England experienced a shock upon Thursday last when it was announced by the representatives of all the leading textile plants in New England that unless certain measures of relief were immediately granted the textile industry was doomed to destruction.

Governor Curley

The announcement by Mr. Frederic C. Dumaine, representing the textile industry that in a short period of 10 years or from 1923 to 1933, the number of employes was reduced from 166,000 to about 63,000, and that the production of cotton textiles by the New England States had been reduced to about 25 per cent of the total produced in the nation, was startling.

When one considers that the textile industry has been rightly recognized for a long period of years as essentially a basic New England industry and that for a period of more than a century, supremacy in the textile field had been a factor in the development of New England, the seriousness of the situation was impressively evident.

The picture might be even more drab and desolate were it not for the amount of manufactured cotton that is today absorbed by the automobile industry.

The transfer of the manufacture of cotton textiles to the south, coupled with the advent of rayon silk and the desire on the part of everyone who can afford to do so, to cease wearing cotton undergarments and replacing them with rayon silk garments; plus the invasion of the textile field by Japan, while it tells the major portion of the story, does not cover it as fully as it might be covered.

Time to Act

The fact is apparent in the minds of all persons that the time has arrived for the adoption by the nation of laws similar to those Great Britain found necessary to adopt in 1931 to protect her markets in Australia, New Zealand and India—that is, the abandonment of free trade and the establishment, not only of a high duty on goods entering this country, but a limitation upon the amount of goods permitted entry.

Under existing laws the President of the United States is empowered whenever it appears necessary, to increase the duty on any article by 50 per cent, but in view of the difference in the wage scale, which in Japan averages 10 cents per hour and the modern plants that are to be found in Japan, the only way American industries can be safe-guarded from invasion by Japanese goods is the establishment of a duty equal to the cost of production in the United States, plus 10 per cent.

The adoption of a duty of this character might be applied to the manufactured goods of every country, and in my opinion the adoption of such measures, from the standpoint of national defense in the present industrial warfare, is justifiable.

It should result in the transferring of at least three million men from welfare rolls to pay rolls and a circulation of the money paid in wages would serve as an impetus in the employment of many men in other lines of activity.

Excess Is Cited

At the present time under the code, northern mills operate at a disadvantage as against the mills operating in the south and this disadvantage according to testimony submitted by reputable mill manufacturers is at least three dollars per week for each male operator.

Under the present conditions the output of cotton textiles in the United States is 50 per cent in excess of consumption and this excess production must be curtailed.

The suggestion has been made for a straight single shift of 48 hours per week. It is possible that organized labor may oppose the change of schedule from 40 to 48 hours per week. The conditions, however, are sufficiently serious to justify immediate action if a great New England industry is to be preserved from absolute extermination.

It is a most pleasing sign of the times when the leaders of what was at one time the principal industry of New England appeal to a Democratic governor in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to aid them in solving what apparently to them appears an unsolvable problem.

As governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts it is my purpose to arrange a conference during the coming week of the representatives and senators in Congress, present the facts to them and invite their co-operation, which I am confident they will extend and endeavor to correct a condition which, if permitted to continue, will spell disaster for many cities and towns in New England.

54 SPIES Of Germany KILLED

POLISH EXPERT SET TRAPS

Copyright, 1935, by International News Service

Berlin, Feb. 20—Fifty-four German spies abroad were executed through the activities of Captain George von Sosnowsky, Polish spy in Berlin, officials, whose names cannot be divulged but who sat in at the trial of Europe's "master spy,," revealed today.

Captain von Sosnowsky is now under sentence of life imprisonment, and two German women confederates have been decapitated, but in his seven years of intrigue he nearly succeeded in wrecking the widespread German system of espionage, the trial was said to have brought out.

There was considerable spueculation as to whether two other recent executions in Germany weer connected with the Sosnowsky case.

On February 9, Kurt Boehm of Ludwigshaven and Paul Merz of Stuttgart were put to death here for betraying military secrets. They were convicted by the People's Court in the fall of 1934 and at the time of their execution no information concerning their activities was released by the government.

7-Year Mystery

For those seven years the German intelligence service frantically, but fruitlessly, searched for the powerful spy who gradually became known on secret service records as "Herr X."

All the time German agents abroad were dwindling in number, directly or indirectly through his efforts. Tip after tip from Berlin brought a series of secret trials in countries suspicious of Germany, and executions before firing squads or on the gallows followed.

All this time Von Sosnowsky was carrying on his espionage behind the cloak of gay parties in his luxurious apartments just across the street from the Reichswehr—standing army—ministry, whose secrets he sought to extract.

He succeeded, by operating through pretty women who attended his salons, in filching some of the best German military and field technical plans, the trial revealed.

He even induced one aristocratic woman to marry a highly placed technical expert and rifle her husband's papers during his absence.

Many Foreigners

The Polish officer's parties attracted some of the smartest feminine personalities in Berlin, including beautiful film stars.

Many German agents who fell into the Sosnosky net were foreigners who had been hired for certain spying tasks in their own countries, supervised by disguised German officers, it was said.

Finally, the late hours and expensive clothes of Sosonowsky's own agents led to an expose of his activities, and the headsman's axe fell on the necks of Baroness Benita van Falkenhayn, also known as Von Berg and Frau Renate von Natzmer.

But Sosnowsky himself may yet go scot-free, in exchange for some German prisoner in Poland—possibly one who fell into the Polish trap through Sosonowsky's own Berlin spy system.

575 Birdmen Pass Test And Wear Eagle Bars

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

More than 575 members of the Boston wing of the Junior Birdmen are now proudly wearing the Eagle bars attached to their regular Junior Birdmen wing pin.

This bar signifies that the owner has successfully passed the written examination qualifying him or her for the second highest ranking membership in the organization.

James F. Cotter

It contains questions on the history of flying, aircraft, pilots and model planes. All Junior Birdmen and Junior Birdwomen, who want to take this examination, should send a letter of request, including three cents postage.

The Eagle examination sheet will be sent on return mail. Then the member writes out the answers and returns the sheet to Boston Wing Headquarters, 100 Summer street. If the member attains a grade of 70 per cent or more he will receive, free of charge, an Eagle bar and small rings by which he attaches the bar to his regular wings.

AMERICA'S BIGGEST-SELLING PACKAGE SOAP

LAKE

Ready to Dive for $4,000,000 GOLD

By Associated Press

New York, Feb. 20—Simon Lake, submarine designer and salvage engineer, hopes to begin next week wresting the cargo from the British ship Hussar, sunk in the East River in 1780. He aims to see whether $4,000,000 in gold is in the buried craft.

If the ice clears out of Hell Gate, the bottleneck in the river between New York and Long Island Sound, Lake will go to work. But he cannot anchor his three vessels in ice floes

Legend says that the $4,000,000 in gold was brought across the Atlantic to pay British troops, but Lake has no assurance of it.

He really is gambling for quite a different stake—business. If he can lift the Hussar's cargo to the surface—a feat which has defied every challenger—Lake will have demonstrated to marine insurance men that many millions annually might be saved by his salvaging efforts.

His preparations have covered decades, and he estimates his expenses at about $500,000.

Baby 'Hexed' By Knife May Live

Williamsport, Pa., Feb. 20—The butcher-knife slashing of an eight-month-old baby spurred authorities today to reopen their campaign against "witch doctors" and "hex spells" in the Pennsylvania Dutch country.

Victim of the latest "pow wow," little James Leroy Fritz, was given a chance to live today after his forehead was slashed with a butcher knife yesterday by his "hexed" older brother.

The "spell" began, the father explained, when his oldest son slashed the baby's forehead earlier with a penknife.

A "mischievous devil" was at work, the parents decided, so they called in the "witch doctor."

After mumbling a ritual, the "doctor" declared the boy "cured by faith" and ordered him left alone with the baby.

While the watched through a window, the "cured" lad picked up a butcher knife and slashed his brother again.

AT THE SIGN OF THE RED APPLE

One out of five orders . . . .
NEW ENGLAND BOILED DINNER

JUST THE OTHER DAY I stood near the serving counter in one of our Boston Waldorf's, while the noonday rush was at its height.

● I had noted, as I came in, the colored sign in the window, announcing that we were serving New England Boiled Dinner . . . one of our very popular specials, fifty-two weeks in the year. Just out of curiosity I thought I would make a mental check and discover for myself how many orders were placed and if it was as popular with young people as those of middle life.

● To be frank, I was astounded at the results. In a short space of time, one out of five orders were "New England Boiled Dinner" . . . boys and girls, and men and women of more mature ages placed their orders and were served. It was never a question of age or walks in life . . . boiled dinners seemed to have a universal appeal.

● As I was about to turn away I glanced over one of these fine nourishing meals. My answer was there, for the serving spoke for itself. There were generous slices of brisket corned beef, well cooked cabbage, carrots, beets, turnips, a mealy boiled potato, and two of those dainty Waldorf rolls.

● A delicious and wholesome meal, certainly . . . and only thirty-five cents. It's on the list for tomorrow.

DOPE War Up to STATES

FARMS URGED FOR VICTIMS

By KENNETH CLARK
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Feb. 20—Federal officials today called for immediate state co-operation in establishing narcotic farms to cure the victims of dope.

State rehabilitation centers are necessary, leaders declared, to win the war against the dope evil.

The national government has taken the lead in providing two farms where federal addict-prisoners and a limited number of volunteers will be treated.

One farm, with facilities for 1000 patients, will be opened in May. It is located near Lexington, Ky. The second colony, at Ft. Worth, Texas, is under construction.

Herded In Jails

Thousands of addicts will be left without adequate provisions for treatment. They are herded today in state and local prisons and jails.

Treated as hardened convicts rather than as sufferers of a dread malady, officials pointed out, they return to society still slaves of the dope habit.

On behalf of these unfortunates, members fo Congress, officials of the United States Public Health Service and the United States Narcotics Bureau appealed to each of the states to provide proper housing and hospitalization.

Federal Aid

They urged that state legislatures, most of which are now in session, appropriate funds without delay to build farms similar to the federal institutions. California already has a special colony.

A system of federal aid to states was suggested by Representative Sirovich (D) of New York, a physician. Funds appropriated by the federal government would be matched by the states in constructing and maintaining farms.

To ease the financial burden on smaller states, he proposed a compact whereby three or four states would band together in building a farm. Said Sirovich:

"Dope addicts should never be arrested and placed in prison. They are suffering from an infectious, contagious and communicable disease that can infest all people who come into contact with them. It is barbaric to treat them as criminals. They should have separate institutions where they can be treated for their horrible affliction."

"CIVIC VIRTUE" Statue to Go

New York, Feb. 20 (INS)—"Civic Virtue," Frederick MacMonnies' statue, long a storm center among art lovers, will be removed from City Hall park, where it has stood for 11 years, Mayor LaGuardia said today. He said he'd refer its disposition to former Mayor John F. Hylan.

"It's his baby," he said. "It appeared during his term."

Sweet Adeline to Be Bride

MISS ADELINE HAVEMEYER
Sugar Heiress Is Engaged

BOSTON Youth to Wed HEIRESS

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER
Universal Service Society Editor

New York, Feb. 20—Havemeyer is one of Mayfair's magical names—a name that signifies all that is best and finest in the traditions of New York society, the society spelled with a capital S.

All of which is a preliminary to recording the fact that Adeline Havemeyer, sugar heiress, is engaged to Richard S. Perkins.

Today, Adeline's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Havemeyer of 960 Fifth avenue, are making a formal announcement of the betrothal.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of the Chaplin school and Sarah Lawrence College.

Mr. Perkins is a son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Perkins of this city and Greenwich. The family hails originally from Boston, and Mrs. Perkins (who, incidentally, plays a musical saw like a vaudeville artist), was, before her marriage, a Boston Coolidge, a name that is holy in Boston Back Bay section.

MEAT PRICE Up 10 Per Cent

The price of meat, which increased more than 10 per cent last month, was largely responsible for the higher cost of living in Massachusetts, Ralph W. Robart, director of the division of the necessaries of life, pointed out. Food generally was up nearly 5 per cent in price.

JAPANESE Probe Attack ON U. S. MEN

By Associated Press

Tokio, Feb. 20—Fumio Goto, minister for home affairs, today promised a speedy investigation of indignities police were accused of inflicting on three Americans in Osaka last week.

Fusaaki Usawa, legal authority, charged in the House of Peers there had been many instances of police infringement of personal rights.

"Newspapers report a case at Osaka involving Americans," Usawa said. "What is the truth?"

Goto said he was not informed but would order a speedy report.

R. S. K. Irvin, former New Yorker, now managing director of an American Corn Products Refining Company subsidiary, reported last week he and two employes had been tied and marched through the streets of Osaka to police station and detained four hours.

BOSTON MILK License Deadlocked

Washington, Feb. 20 (AP)—Still deadlocked over a proposed amendment to the Boston milk license, farm adjustment officials resumed discussion today in an effort to reach a decision.

The control committee of the AAA discussed the proposed amendment from early yesterday afternoon until late evening without reaching an agreement and the matter was referred to a smaller group for further study.

PEAKS Once High as ALPS

ICE AGE DROP OCCURRED HERE

By HIRAM PERCY MAXIM
Copyright, 1935, King Features Synd., Inc.

From 7000 feet below sea level to 16,000 feet above, seems to us today a profound change in the earth's surface.

Yet such changes were ordinary events in the past.

Off the New England coast, seven thousand feet below the surface of the Atlantic, lie the channels of ancient rivers which flowed through lands that were once high above the level of the sea.

Off the New England coast, seven thousand feet below the surface of the Atlantic, lie the channels of ancient rivers which flowed through lands that were once high above the level of the sea.

We are told that the White Mountains in New Hampshire, the Green Mountains in Vermont, the Berkshires in Massachusetts, the Catskills and the Adirondacks in New York, and the Alleghenies in Pennsylvania, were once all as high as the Alps.

Ice exerted an important influence in the early risings and sinkings . Areas at great elevation collected enormous quantities of ice and snow.

Earth's Changes

The great ice cap on Greenland is a modern example. This load can become too heavy for the thin crust of the Earth to bear. Then the loaded area settles into the molten and soft material underlying the thin crust of the Earth.

In bygone days, as areas settled, other areas pushed up where the load was lighter and the crust weak. Thus, mountainous areas were lowered and sea bottoms raised.

When we realize that the Earth's crust averages only 20 miles in thickness, and that the Earth's diameter is 8000 miles, these subsidences seem reasonable, for the thickness of the crust is only a quarter of one per cent of the diameter.

According to the geologists holding this theory, when a land area settles to a lower elevation, the ice starts to melt.

This melting uncovers dark colored rocks which absorb the heat of the Sun's radiations and become relatively warm.

The melting, once started, automatically brings more melting, and conditions swing to the other extreme.

These changes occur slowly. Probably hundreds of centuries pass during the settling and elevating periods.

As the great shifts occurred, and the serious readjustments in the Earth's crust went on, earthquakes and earth rumblings, with their accompanying grindings and moanings, must have been frequent and of titanic magnitude.

Geologists also attempt to account for the recurring ice ages of the past by pointing out that an oscillating system probably prevailed.

When one area became loaded with ice and settled, an equal area raised up in another place.

As time went on, each subsidence and elevation became of lesser magnitude. The Earth's crust gradually became adjusted.

BENNETT Recovering From INJURIES

By Associated Press

London, Feb. 20—Richard Bennett, famous American actor, recently injured in a fall from a horse, was so much improved today he was permitted to talk with visitors for the first time.

Bennett was injured in Harpenden, where he was visiting, after he took out a horse which had not been exercised for a week.

The actor was carried into a cottage where he remained until Tuesday morning. His condition became more serious and he was taken to a London nursing home where x-rays disclosed the extent of his injuries.

Physicians attending him said today they believed he definitely was past the crisis.

One of Bennett's three daughters, Barbara, wife of Morton Downey, was expected to arrive from the United States tomorrow to be at her father's beside.

Court Martial

London, Feb. 20—Rear Admiral S. R. Bailey and the captains of the Battleships Hood and Renown will be court martialed to fix responsibility for collision of the ships in naval exercises off the coast of Spain, January 23, the admiralty announced.

Victim Gains in Operation on Heart

By Associated Press

Cleveland, Feb. 20—Physicians in Lakeside Hospital kept a close eye today on the fight between a surgeon's skill and angina pectoris, a deadly heart ailment.

A week ago today an unidentified man, threatened by death with an ailing heart, agreed to submit to the first operation of its kind on a human being.

Today, hospital officials described his condtion an "very satisfactory."

Dr. Claude S. Beck, performed an operation he had done many times before on animals.

He severed one end of the pectoral muscle on the man's chest. This end was then fastened to the wall of the man's heart.

The surgeon hoped that through this replaced muscle, the flow of blood into the heart would be increased. Hardening of the man's coronary arteries had dangerously reduced this supply of blood.

Here's Brand New Light on Fiction

BOOK ISN'T "HIGH BROW," BUT MAKES ONE THINK

MODERN FICTION—By Dorothy Brewster and Angus Burrell—Columbia University Press.

By ERNEST KIRSCHTEN

The older you grow, the fewer novels you read.

That, according to Joseph Wood Krutch, one of the most honest, intelligent and interesting critics of the day, is an almost universal experience.

Your interest in fiction does not decline, he says, because you are growing lazy and slack or because you are "tired of it all."

It is because you no longer need novels.

Stories, according to Mr. Krutch, are only substitutes for your own knowledge of people. As you grow older, you find that more and more books only tell you things that you already know.

SHAPE OUR ATTITUDES

Whether he wants to, or not, an author is influenced by the facts of his life. And whether he knows it or not, the reader is influenced by books—even by passing detective thrillers.

It is with this almost psychoanalytic quality of books that Miss Brewster and Mr. Burrell, both professors of English, deal in their very interesting work.

They make it clear that your state of health or what you ate may affect your appreciation of a book. They point out the necessity for knowing your own attitude toward life in order to evaluate a book. And they also point out the need for knowning something about the author.

CLEARLY AND SWIFTLY

This may all sound very heavy. The book is not. It reaches conclusions clearly and swiftly. By far the greater part of it is devoted to detailed considerations of modern authors, Gissing, Dostoevsky, Conrad, Maugham, Bennett, Mann, D. H. Lawrence, Huxley and many others. If it were only because of what it tells us about them, it would be valuable.

Anyone who wants to read with greater enjoyment and a deeper understanding, will appreciate the book. For many it will shed a new light on fiction, illuminating things in themselves of which they were unaware.

It is not "high brow." But it will make you think, which is a good thing—often a lot of fun.

GOLD EAGLE GUY—A play by Melvin Levy—Random House.

Even those who have seen the Group Theater's 1935 success, "Gold Eagle Guy," will be pleased with its publication by Random House—perhaps even more than those who have not seen it.

Duplicating the Group's hit of a year ago—"Men in White"—this play tells the life story of Guy Button, a roistering sailor, who fights his way to the top along the San Francisco waterfront in the days between the Civil War and the earthquake and fire of 1906.

The story is typical of the rise of more than one shipping magnate and comes to a gripping climax with the fire itself. It is almost as good as a book as on the stage.

Fast Modern Way to Relieve a Cold

How to Ease Distress Almost Instantly

FOLLOW DIRECTIONS IN PICTURES HERE

1. Take 2 BAYER Aspirin Tablets. Make sure you get the BAYER Tablets you ask for.

2. Drink a full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.

3. If throat is sore, crush and stir 3 BAYER Aspirin Tablets in a third of a glass of water. Gargle twice. This eases throat soreness almost instantly.

THE simple method pictured here is the way many doctors now treat colds to relieve the aches and pains colds bring with them!

You can relieve nearly any cold you get by taking BAYER Aspirin, drinking plenty of water; and, if throat is sore, gargling with BAYER Aspirin Tablets stirred in water.

This is recognized as a remarkably safe, sure, QUICK way. For it will relieve an ordinary cold almost as fast as you caught it.

Ask your doctor about this. And when you buy, be sure that you get the real BAYER Aspirin Tablets. They dissolve or disintegrate almost instantly. And thus work almost instantly when you take them. And in a gargle, Genuine Bayer Aspirin Tablets disintegrate with speed and completeness, leaving no irritating particles or grittiness.

BAYER Aspirin prices have been decisively reduced on all sizes, so there's no point now in accepting other than the real Bayer article you want.

PARKER AS GUEST ARTIST TONIGHT

By N. F. T.

Another air acquisition for Frank Parker, the tenor. He adds one more "mike" turn to his already stout schedule and solos when the weekly "Penthouse Party" presentation takes to the four winds (WBZ) between 8 and 8:30 tonight.

Frank must figure to sing on at least one outstanding network presentation each night in the week, except Sundays. It so happens that is the night he takes on two settings, the Jack Benny broadcast and the new Charles Winninger "Headliners" half-hour. It's obviously attaining the peak of popularity. Alas, and as Fate so often decrees, there's a tonsilitis operation in the immediate offing for Parker. Rumor has it that Frank Munn will most likely be called upon to assume the assignments, if and when the former Frank submits to the surgeons.

N. F. T.

This evening marks the second of the "Peter Pfeiffer" portrayals by Jack Pearl, erstwhile "Baron Munchausen" of radioland. Jack isn't likely to find his new character going across with quite the bang that his "Baron" hit registered. Mainly, methinks, because "Peter Pfeiffer" is purely fictional, whereas the "Baron Munchausen" represented an auspicious historic illusion, that of the world's most famous fibber.

However, the music and general trend of last week's "Peter Pfeiffer" opener proved acceptable and rather pleasing generally, despite the fact that folks were awaiting any sort of Hauptmann jury flashes. Tonight should afford a fine follow-up opportunity (WNAC), meaning as of 10 to 10:30 p. m.

Big time takes another able Hub chap out from our midst. Al Duffy, genial press representative for the Shubert Theaters, joins up with the outstanding radio and stage star, Phil Baker. Duffy will manage affairs for Baker, beginning March 2, with offices down New York way.

* * *

More than 10,000 persons have sought a chance to exhibit their talents on Fred Allen's "Amateur Night," although it's a comparatively new feature of the "Town Hall" show.

Tonight's Town Hall broadcast will be the eighth amateur show in the Allen series.

Hundreds of letters from all parts of the country pour in daily, according to Jim Harkins, who selects amateurs for Town Hall. They represent every class of society—from mechanics who get music from a compressed air tank, to bankers who sing tenor.

Xylophone players, men who rattle tunes out of two sticks of wood, 300-pound women aiming to imitate Kate Smith, crooners with long hair, girls who talk like Portland, would-be humorists, violinists, piano players, musical-saw players, Spanish contraltos, Vermont slate makers . . . A vast procession longs to stand before Fred's microphone.

Radio Questions, Answers

Q—Why do they mention Nelson Eddy as the tenor on the Monday night tire program, then present Richard Crooks? How can we obtain photo of Conrad Thibault?

G. M. C. of Winthrop.

A—If you check, you will find that this attraction alternates the stars between Crooks and Eddy and you may have been expecting one on the night the other was scheduled.

Q—Is the "Harka" character in the "H-Bar-O" program a real Indian? E. C., of Walpole.

A—No, the part is played by a radio actor, name not known.

Q—What programs is Frank Ruben of Boston acting as master of ceremonies for? Does Warren Hull speak the lines for Conrad Thibault during the regular "Gibson Family" feature?

James M., of Medford.

A—Only on special occasions, mostly charitable presentations. Yes, the voice is that of Hull.

Q — Does Earl Nelson sing through WMEX under the name of Eddie Brenner?

Steady Listener.

A—No, the vocalist is really Ed Brenner, although his voice is quite similar to that of Nelson's.

Q—Who is the announcer who introduces "Curly Joe" on the WBZ waves? Are "Lazy Dan" and "Mr. Jim" the same person? How old is Linus Travers?

Mary, of Roxbury.

A—Different studio staff members do the "mike" job. Yes, the same fellow. Linus is just over the 30 mark.

Q—Is there any likelihood of Al Jolson returning to the air?

Syncopator, of Salem.

A—No advice in hand at present, although there is always likelihood, since new program planners and personalities are continually seeking fresh sponsorship.

Q—Will there be any discussion of the new gold decision voiced and outlined by President Roosevelt? R. S. K., of Wrentham.

A—There isn't any presidential address on the air contemplated at this writing.

Do you believe in fairies?

The RKO-Keith's Memorial Theater, beginning next Friday, offers you the last opportunity to celebrate in its 52d Jubilee featuring "big name" stars, in person. The screen offers many of today's "About Faces" stars in "The Good Fairy." Visit this famous RKO-Keith Memorial Theater, beginning Friday, and you should have little difficulty in solving all of today's leading stage, screen and radio stars.

Of course, you must correctly answer the question asked, daily. Today's query is a trifle tricky. Do you know the RIGHT answer?

Fill in the squares beneath each drawing with the correct solutions and use the letter "A" as a guide. Mail all of your week's solutions to The About Faces Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass. To all who know their movie stars and successfully compete in this week's "About Faces" series by Art. Moger, the Boston Evening American offers a chance to share in $25 in weekly cash awards.

A good fairy awaits you if you really KNOW—

Betty Alden on 'Beacon Hill'

Fashion Show Attracts Many Fashionables

By BETTY ALDEN

WE SO OFTEN REGARD Mrs. Beacon Hill as a person whose name is in the social register, who attends accepted functions and who wears the choicest clothes . . . in other words, as a symbol of American society . . . that it is quite strange to think of her as a real human being, a woman and a mother . . .

MRS. ALFRED KIDDER, 2d

But we have noticed that, in spite of her many social activities, Mrs. Beacon Hill is just as genuinely enthusiastic about her children's part in social activities and the events in which they appear, as other mothers in other walks of life . . .

This thought is forcibly brought home to us whenever we attend a fashion show in which society girls take part . . . Mrs. Beacon Hill is always present in the audience to admire her daughter's poise and grace as a model and she has usually brought with her as many friends and relatives as she can muster, just as any other mother does when daughter is in a high school play or on the amateur hour . . .

Spring Styles Shown

YESTERDAY AFTERNOON at the showing of advance spring styles which Mrs. James Lincoln Huntington sponsored in the Nippon Room at the Vendome, Mrs. Thomas Barbour was one of the most intensely enthusiastic applauders of the pretty society mannequins, and especially of one golden blonde, willowy girl who strutted up and down the runway with all the composure of a professional model . . . this girl was Mrs. Alfred Kidder, 2d, who was Mary Barbour until her marriage last June . . .

In Mrs. Barbour's party were her sister, Mrs. Frederick I. Emery and Mrs. J. Lewis Bremer who came to lend their moral support to the young model . . . Cousin Joe Emery, prominent in the affairs of the Junior League, and Louisa and Julia Barbour thought Mary was a credit to the family, especially in that wide brimmed navy blue felt hat which so completed one of those suits so essential to a perfect spring wardrobe, of navy and white flannel . . .

Though Louisa and Julia Barbour are still sub-debs, they have already had a glimpse of what is ahead of them in their coming out years . . . not only a glimpse but they had actual experience in the vicissitudes and punctilios of social conduct at the house dance which their mother gave for them last week . . .

Mrs. John P. Ramsey and Mrs. John P. Hawes occupied a table for two while they scrutinized the fashions and Mrs. Harold McNeil, intent upon finding an appropriate evening dress to wear to dances on the steamer next week on her way to Europe, took notes as the girls paraded the latest styles for formal occasions . . .

Mrs. Arthur Richmond Assists

THE DAINTY BLACK NET PARTY FROCK with dusty pink sash and nosegay which Mrs. Hamilton Heard modeled caught the fancy of Mrs. Oliver Lothrop and Mrs. Dorothy Lucas Higginson . . .

Mrs. Pierpont Stackpole, Mrs. Wallace Goodwin and Mrs. Charles Boyden were delighted to see Mrs. Arthur Richmond on the runway . . . society audiences have had the pleasure of seeing Mrs. Richmond in the spotlight before, but as a singer rather than as a mannequin . . .

Mrs. J. A. Lowell Blake gave her namesake, Leslie Blake, plenty of applause when she appeared in an apple green chiffon dress, destined to grace some fair lady on a starlit summer evening . . . Faith Barney brought spring into the Nippon room with the navy and white printed silk dress which she wore with a wide brimmed straw sailor hat . . .

Mrs. Emery Mason, with her debutante daughter, Persis Mason, Mrs. A. L. West Movius and Mrs. Paul Revere were others who were making mental notes of what to include in their spring wardrobes . . .

Charlotte Cushman Club Reception

FROM THE VENDOME Mrs. Paul Revere hurried over to the Charlotte Cushman Club, where she found Dennis King and Doris Dalton, the leading lady in his play, already receiving with Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French, at the tea dance at which Mr. King and Miss Dalton were invited to meet some of Boston's most persistent theater-goers . . .

The guest book at the Charlotte Cushman Club was signed by many names familiar to followers of the stage . . . Other members of the "Petticoat Fever" cast were present, as well as practically all of the actors and actresses who are appearing in "The Drunkard" at the Copley Theater . . .

The play will be presented in the Brookline High School auditorium on Friday evening and Saturday afternoon, March 22 and 23.

Miss Evelyn Cunningham, who is coaching the play, has arranged a prologue which includes old English folksongs and Pirate songs by representatives from each of the Brookline Troops.

The scenery is being designed by Miss Virginia Joss and a group of scouts. Miss Marie Humphreys is in charge of the production and Miss Ruth Daniels will assist.

The play committee is headed by Mrs. Henry Ware and she is being assisted by Miss Katherine Briggs, Mrs. Francis D. Capper and Mrs. Theodore F. Pitman, who are in charge of patronesses' invitations and tickets, Mrs. Arthur Moir, publicity, Mrs. Wilbur F. Higgins, in charge of programs.

Also Mrs. Arthur D. Ronimus, candy; Mrs. Hubert J. Goulston, ushers; Mrs. Irving Marshall, flower girls and Mrs. Allan G. Waite, transportation and policing.

Mrs. Robert W. Sayles, who is chairman of the council financial committee, is serving as treasurer of the play committee which also includes Mrs. A. T. Joss, costumes, Mrs. Cadis Phipps and Miss Francis Howard, properties.

Zero Hour Dinner

Fannie Hurst to Be Guest Speaker

CALLING themselves Military Police, and armed with the determination that no one shall be absent from the Zero Hour Dinner, without adequate reason, a group of society women, under the leadership of Miss H. Warren of Dover, have formed a committee to round up all those Emergency Campaign workers.

The dinner, which will be held in Symphony Hall at 6:30 next Monday, will be reminiscent of World War days.

Fannie Hurst, the well known author, will be the principal speaker, coming over from New York for the occasion.

Those on the committee for this dinner which inaugurates Round-Up Week the final, intensive week of the campaign drive are Mrs. Reginald W. Bird, Mrs. George S. West, of Chestnut Hill, Mrs. Hyman Freiman, Mrs. Talbot Aldrich of Mt. Vernon street, Mrs. Malcom Donald of Milton and Mrs. J. Gardner Bradley.

Stuart Refuses to Let Julie Help

CHAPTER 33

He called up the artist supplies' place on the telephone and happened to get Hermann, the old German who knew his dyes so well.

"Oh, Hermann. This is Mr. Pennington. I reckon I want the credit department—"

"Yes, Mr. Pennington." The old voice hesitated. "I'm sorry about—a—bout that notice that was sent to you—"

"That was all right. The bill is long overdue. But I don't know what to use for money so I can get more paint!"

"Mr. Pennington—excuse me—but did you ever think of selling your clothes?"

"My clothes?"

"I mean—not the tweeds you wear now. But you used to come in here wearing beautiful suits after you got back from the the Orient. I used to be a tailor in the Old Country so I noticed. I thought maybe if you still had them—"

"Oh, Yes, I have them somewhere." Stuart was remembering the Eddie Meyer clothes that had been locked away in a trunk since the day he moved out of Sharlene's house.

"Good! There are lots of actors and such in Hollywood that would be glad to buy those clothes. Solomon Sobel specializes in them. Can't I send him up to you, Mr. Pennington?"

"Why," said Stuart, laughing a little in embarrassment, "that's mighty kind. If you think—well, yes, we could try it!"

"All right, Mr. Pennington. And I want to remind you I have some of that special alazarine crimson you used to use."

"Thanks. I'll be in soon."

Stuart dragged the wardrobe trunk into the studio from where it had stood for months in the second bedroom, and finally found the keys in a tumbled bureau drawer cheek by jowl with some collars and a few discarded tubes of paint.

He rather shrank from opening the trunk. He had been successful in walling off all sick memories of those last turbulent months. He had walled of Sharlene herself so successfully that he rarely thought of her any more.

Drawing out the suits on the rods, he satisfied himself that the moths had not ravaged them. When he shook out the handsome dinner clothes he had worn on his "Last Appearance" as "Prince Consort," his hand encountered something soft as flower petals in a pocket.

Like Sharlene!

Stuart drew it out. It was the scarf the Maharana of Udaipur had given Sharlene on that magic journey to the Wind Palace at Jai Samand. It was drawn through her little diamond-studded wedding ring and clung to his hands like a cobweb with a gossamer yet persistent caress.

"So delicate," she had said, "that one may pass a whole scarf through a finger ring."

She had left him the scarf—and the ring, mute reminders of the glorious moments that were his alone. She must have felt that even she had no right to share that memory with him any longer . . . So like Sharlene!

Suddenly Stuart buried his face in the scarf. The fragrance of Sharlene still pervaded it. He stood there in the big, untidy room, shaken like the silver birch outside his window in the February wind. The diamonds in the ring cut into his mouth as he crushed it against his face . . .

When he lifted his eyes at last there was a new look dawning in their sorrowful depths. Something just being born—not yet seeing the light—but coming—coming—out of agony into light.

An amazing equipage was drawing to a stop at the foot of the path to Stuart's house. Cream colored with black velvet upholstery, small and ornate. It was less like an automobile than like Cinderella's pumpkin coach. The chauffeur in black uniform and puttees (too bad it couldn't have been small clothes!) ran around to open the door.

Julie stepped out of her coach, drawing sables about her small person, and regarded the step incline with annoyance.

"I don't know how I'll ever make it in this wind," she observed petulantly.

The chauffeur measured her petite form with his eye. "I could carry you if it was on the level, but—" He cast a hopeless glance up the hill.

"Not for Sale"

"Oh, I guess I can walk it. It has been done!"

When she walked in on him, Stuart was striding up and down the room holding an exquisite East Indian veil in his hand. Julie noticed it instantly, her attention pouncing as always on any sort of beautiful wearing apparel. He turned dazzled eyes to her, struggling up from dreams, not even recognizing the intruder at first.

"Hello, darling! Where'd you get that gorgeous—" Her eyes caught the open trunk and the clothes. "What's up, Stuart? You're not going away?"

"What? Oh, no. I'm broke and I'm selling this truck to raise some money."

"Don't do it!" Julie advanced into the room and dropped her furs on a chair. "I'll buy that scarf, Stuart, and give you more for it than you could get for all the clothes—"

She reached out a determined hand for the veil, but he deftly whipped it away from her and tucked it into the inner pocket of his coat.

"It's not for sale," he said eventually.

"But—I could use it in my next picture."

"So can I," he said with some strange inward elation.

"What do you mean?" Julie demanded sulkily.

"For a prop, you know."

"Oh! Like that Spanish comb you brought home one time . . . You never got to paint me as a Mexican girl, did you, Stuart?"

"No." He spoke absently, almost abruptly. An idea was stirring, stirring, demanding to be born.

Julie curled up on the couch. "Set fire to that trash in the fireplace, darling. This room is awfully cold."

He did so. She kicked off her little pumps and held her stockinged feet toward the blaze, watching Stuart as he strode up and down the room. There began to be a pervading excitement about him.

His blue eyes sparkled when he turned in his restless pacing to face the fire. His hair was still tumbled from the wind. His mouth—he had cut it. Julie longed to kiss it.

At first she watched him lazily while she basked like a kitten, reveling in the sight of him. Then she began to catch his excitement, only hers was for a very different reason.

"I Love You!"

"I had to see you, Stuart," she said throatily. "I've been dying to see you!"

He threw her an absent smile and continued to pace. She got up quickly and ran to seize his arm, padding along with him in silk shod feet, up and down, up and down the room. He was not aware of her, but she did not know it for a while.

"Know why I came, darling? 'Cause I love you, that's why! And I get hungry for you. Hungry, Stuart—"

"To the hungry heart—" he murmured under his breath.

She could feel the tenseness of his arm under her hand.

"Of course you were right, darling, not to marry me then and live my life. But look, Stuart, why can't we recon—yes, reconsider it?"

She ran with little kitten-padding steps to keep up with his strides. She did not look at him, but she knew that he was stirred.

"Of course, I've got lots of men friends—it isn't that." She paused for that to sink in—to get him jealous. He hurried his steps and she was jubilant.

"But you see," she went on caressingly, "I miss you, darling, and I want you—"

DAISIES bloom all over this hand-knitted and crocheted coat and beret set. It's bound to be the favorite in her wardrobe, and far from difficult to make. Made of knitting and crochet cotton it will wash without shrinking. The bright embroidery in different colors on the swagger coat is repeated in a circle on the matching beret. Though the English style of tailored simplicity is still favored, there is a distinct trend toward pretty things again, without going to the extent of "birthday cake" effects, however. For directions, write to Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

MANY of the requests that come to our desk are of general interest. We pass them along, hoping they will benefit many other readers.

TO A READER: Either recipe is perfectly balanced. In one recipe you notice that the brown sugar is firmly packed. This is equivalent to two cups of brown sugar piled loosely in a cup. If you like a strong chocolate taste we suggest using the recipe with four squares, otherwise use three.

QUESTION: "Have you a recipe for fig square filling? I have searched in many cook books and have been unable to find it. Mrs. L. S., Medford.

ANSWER:

FIG SQUARES

1 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
½ cup sour milk
5 cups bread flour
¼ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt

Cream the shortening, add sugar and cream again. Add unbeaten eggs, one at a time, beating thoroughly, after each addition. Add sour milk, then fold in flour which has been sifted with salt, baking powder and soda. Roll out to a sheet as large as the baking pan. Spread with Fig Filling. Cover with a layer of cookie dough. Bake in a hot oven, 375 deg. F. Cut in squares while warm.

FIG FILLING

2 cups chopped Figs
½ cp water
½ cup sugar
½ cup nuts

Add sugar and water to the chopped figs. Simmer 10 minutes. Remove from fire, cool and add the chopped nuts.

TO A READER: Either recipe is perfectly balanced. In one recipe you notice that the brown sugar is firmly packed. This is equivalent to two cups of brown sugar piled loosely in a cup. If you like a very chocolatey taste we suggest using the recipe with four squares, otherwise use the three squares.

QUESTION: "Will you please give me a recipe for Date Fudge?" Mrs. F. E., Reading.

ANSWER:

DATE FUDGE
(1¼ pounds)

2 cups sugar
2-3 cup milk
2 squares chocolate or ½ cup cocoa
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons light corn syrup
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup dates, coarsely chopped

Put the sugar, milk, chocolate, salt and corn syrup in a saucepan; stir over low heat until the chocolate has melted and the sugar dissolved. Increase the heat; boil steadily until the thermometer registers 236-238 deg. F. (the soft boil stage). Stir the mixture occasionally during the boiling period to prevent burning. Remove the cooked candy from the stove; drop in the butter; set aside to cool without stirring. Cool until the thermometer reggisters 110 deg. F. or until the pan can be held on the palm of the hand without discomfort. Add vanilla and beat with a wooden spoon until the fudge loses its gloss and becomes thick enough to hold its shape when a little is dropped from the spoon. Stir the dates into the candy. Turn into slightly buttered pans to make a layer ¾ inch deep. When cold cut into squares lift from pan with a spatula.

Lotion CLEARS UP An Acne CONDITION

By Juliet Shelby

BEAUTIFUL, smooth and unblemished, the skin of Loretta Young always has been and always will be the envy of every woman who has ever seen it. Hers is the clearness of complexion that may be likened to the glory of Carrara marble.

Some women haven't lovely skin because of sheer neglect, other women are victims of a skin condition which appears after an illness or which arrives during adolescence. Such conditions dermatologists classify as "acne."

An acne condition varies with the individual. What cures one victim will only irritate another. So it is wise to consult a skin specialist if your skin is annoyingly blemished or blotchy. Even then you may have to experiment along with this knowledge in the hope that you will find a cure.

But women with just slightly blemished skin can do much to rectify such a condition. Slight red eruptions or stubborn whiteheads require more specific treatment than the skin cleansing and nourishing.

From across the sea comes a treatment for acne which has helped many women. Bear in mind, however, that these women did not have diseased skin, but a sluggish skin which was not discharging the impurities from the pores as it should; perhaps skin that had been irritated by a choice of poor cometics.

Constant treatment will soon make the skin as smooth and lovely as Loretta Young's always has been. You must always remember that the first rule in caring for skin is cleanliness. Without cleanliness no lotion or treatment will help a mite.

If you wish to learn the name of this acne lotion, call Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000. If you prefer writing, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American, for this information.

Beauty Answer

Question: Do you know of a cohesive chin-strap for restoring sagging muscles? I have heard that there is such a thing on the market, and am very anxious to learn where I can buy one, and also the price. My chin is beginning to lose its firm, youthful contour.

Mrs. Grace M., Lawrence.

Answer: Yes, there is an excellent and very inexpensixe strap for relaxed muscles on the market. It comes in two sizes—25 and 50 cents, and does wonders in reshaping a chin and holding the important muscles in place. Trade names of products are never mentioned in this column so if you will write to me again, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope I will be glad to furnish you with the name of this strap. It is cohesive, which makes it easy to use.

Fedora Hats

FEDORA brims on tailored hats that dip in the front and sweep upward at the sides offer some of the most becoming lines seen in many seasons. These may have fedora crowns crushed down deeply to produce a low effect, or a flower pot crown, leaning to one side.

Another variation is the crown adapted from the fireman's helmet, peaked at front and rounded in back. Toyo straw is one of the favorite mediums for developing these styles.

HIS WIFE? I THOUGHT SHE WAS HIS AUNT!

DOT: Oh no, she's younger than he is—I know that!

ALICE: But her hands—they're so rough and coarse and old!

DOT: That's because they're "dishpan"—I must tell her to change to Lux!

ALICE: Yes—it keeps my hands simply lovely. And costs less than one cent a day!

LUX for Dishes—prevents old-looking hands

Charming Crocheted Collars

CROCHETED NECKWEAR PATTERN 929

With the coming of spring, all of us feel the urge to add to and freshen our wardrobe.

And what could be a better way than crocheted neckwear?

Who of us doesn't yearn for that flattering bit of cascading lace that this jabot forms. And if you want something very striking, make the large meshed collar—it's lovely in a petit boucle, though you can do it in cotton if you wish. The third collar is that popular type that is just a sailor collar turned around. You can wear it with the opening to the front, if you prefer—but it's smartest as shown! The design is a simply dainty mesh with a picot forming diagonal lines.

Pattern 929 comes to you with detailed directions for making the collars shown; illustrations of them and of all stitches used; and material requirements.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to Boston Evening American, Needlecrfat Dept., 82 Eighth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Wool Gingham

THERE ARE wool knit affairs in gay gingham checks and plaids on a white background, which look young and light-hearted for southern resort wear, and also have the important attribute of figure restraint.

Those of us who have experimented with exotic bathing suits of batik cottons, and such have found that nothing equals close-knit wool jersey in smoothing out some of the superfluous curves in the great American figure.

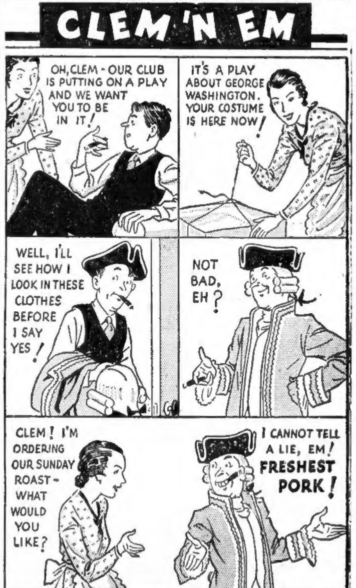
So you may look frivolous and at the same time know that the hipline is under control in the new wool ginghams.

"Sunburn" Suit

SUPPLANTING the white swim suit, which had its day, is the new "sunburn" shade, which is planned to match exactly the wearer's sun-tanned skin.

It may look slightly daring at a short distance, but close inspection reveals that it respects all the proprieties, and that you really aren't sponsoring a nudist colony at all.

The season's swim suits are briefer than ever, many of the brassiere-and-shorts school, leaving vast expanses of skin to the tender mercies of the southern sun.



CLEM 'N EM
OH, CLEM - OUR CLUB IS PUTTING ON A PLAY AND WE WANT YOU TO BE IN IT!
IT'S A PLAY ABOUT GEORGE WASHINGTON. YOUR COSTUME IS HERE NOW!
WELL, I'LL SEE HOW I LOOK IN THESE CLOTHES BEFORE I SAY YES!
NOT BAD, EH?
CLEM! I'M ORDERING OUR SUNDAY ROAST - WHAT WOULD YOU LIKE?
I CANNOT TELL A LIE, EM! FRESHEST PORK!

. . . CLEM'S Washington costume was not the only thing responsible for that enthusiastic answer ". . . FRESHEST PORK!" Note the emphasis he put on that word "FRESHEST" . . . for he knows it is more flavorful, more tender, juicier. Here's why . . . it is absolutely fresh, coming from choice corn-fed porkers raised in the middle west, brought on alive and dressed fresh right here in New England.

Try it for your Sunday dinner. Be sure, however, to ask for Squire's FRESHEST PORK.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

Marriage For Spite —A Hard Row to Hoe

GETTING MARRIED for spite is about on the par with that old saw "cutting off your nose to spite your face," with perhaps a few advantages to be said for the latter form of self-inflicted malice.

For, like Queen Elizabeth during the last decade of her life, you needn't look in your mirror and be reminded that your nose is missing.

But, if you're married, there's no escaping the partner you took for better or for worse.

Two young people, who had nothing against each other and were apparently good friends before they married, are now on the verge of a divorce because they married to spite someone else. The girl's letter follows:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Dave and I used to go to school together, and we'd always been good friends till we got married. And there's a long story back of that.

"I was engaged to a man, and I was crazy about him, and he loved me just as much. But it looked as if we could never get together without a [illegible] over something. We'd start out in the most affectionate way, and then before we'd gone three blocks, the quarrelling would begin. I was over-sensitive and thought he was belittling me, and perhaps he thought something like that, too.

"Whatever it was I would often come home [illegible] for [illegible] have him [illegible] a [illegible] or during a walk [illegible] I never wanted [illegible].

[illegible] I was [illegible] madder [illegible] I gave him back his ring and [illegible] hoped never to see him [illegible]. I waited for over a month and thought he'd write or phone or come back as usual, but he didn't do any of those things.

"Instead, he wrote me a letter—very nice and dignified—and announced his engagement to a girl I'd always been a little jealous of. He told me in his letter that he hoped I'd be happy, but realized now how mistaken our engagement had been as we could never get along together.

"My one crazy [illegible] was to beat him to it [illegible] married [illegible]. So I hunted up Dave, who [illegible] and whose [illegible] had been broken about six [illegible] before, and we ran away and were married immediately, just to show that we didn't care.

"Of course, we quarreled from the very beginning because we didn't care about each other the way we should, and married only to spite someone else. Now we both want to get out of it, and feel we hate each other, but we are ashamed to let the old crowd know that we got married for spite.

My mother is so disgusted with me that she says I can't come home to her, and I just don't know what to do.

"Kitty."

Don't you think it would be well, before you do anything else as rash as getting married for spite, to take stock of your assets and liabilities, as people in business say? You and Dave were very good friends before you married each other to spite someone else. Why don't you try going on that basis for six months at least? Friendship is one of the best things in the world on which to found marriage. If you can get over the idea that you married for spite, I think it's not unlikely that you might make a go of things even now.

From what you tell me, I judge that your mother feels the same way, too. At least, the experiment seems worth trying.

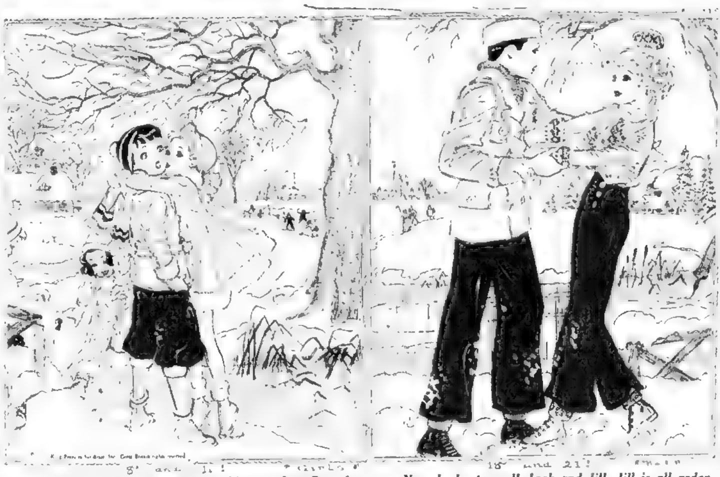
Time, the Humorist!

By Nell Brinkley



8 and 11!
Girls
18 and 21!

Time has been called many things—the Soothe, the Obliterator, the Comforter, the Tragedian, the I evitable, the Enemy, the Leveler. But most of all perhaps is Time, the Humorist, to most of us—the humorists with a touch of bitter-sweet in his jokes.

Time remembers a pair of lovers when all the cared about was to love each other. Now he finds the far apart, not caring in the least where the other is what doing; he stout, and not looking the beau he use to; she stouter still, and her desire to please a litt blunted. Both married to someone else!

Now look at small Jack and Jill. Jill is all ardor and affection for her paragon of manly wonder, and she shows how she likes him. "I do like you, Jackie." And Jackie squirms and says, "Aw-w-w! Girls!"

Then look at big Jack and Jill. Jack is the wooer now. All ardor and admiration for the grown Jill's eyes and hair and lips, his dream of all fair women. And he tries to show her how he feels. "I love you, Jill." But Jill holds him away with firm hands, and says, "No! Don't"—NELL BRINKLEY.

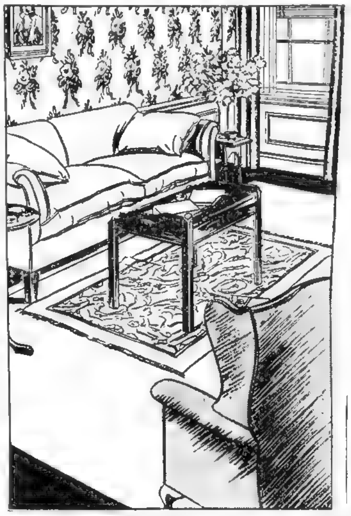
A ROOM WITH A WELCOME



"What a lovely, friendly room!"

When you hear someone being complimented like this chalk up a credit mark for the floor covering—among other things.

For that—at least as much as any other single item of furnishing—can make or mar a room.

Not that it need be expensive. Have you ever noticed how lovely simple hooked rugs look in a room furnished with Early American maple and gay chintz? Nothing could possibly be more appropriate.

But another type of room—the one illustrated, for example—needs a plain center rug, to make the room look larger, and to harmonize with the other furnishings. Don't you like the little figured rug in front of the sofa? Well, that was put there to add pattern and color to a room that might otherwise be too plain.

What about the color of a floor covering, you ask? Again, the choice depends on your other furnishings. Decorators used to say that a floor covering should be darker than the walls. This is a still a safe rule to follow. But some of the most charming modern rooms boast light floors, light walls and gay rugs.

Wouldn't you like to know more about all this? Our booklet on home decorating tells you much more. It gives ideas on how to make a house charming; how to know good furniture and how to arrange it. There are other charts for the different rooms; suggestions for making floors, walls and windows more attractive. And much more besides. Many of these hows and whys are shown in photographs of rooms that you can study and compare. You really should have the guidance of our 36-page booklet, "An Introduction to Decoration." Ambitious Doubled Contract Fulfilled by End Play

By MRS. CULBERTSON

Mr. Walter Malowan of New York City fulfilled an ambitious doubled contract on the hand below by end-playing his right-hand opponent in the trump suit.

South, Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

North:
♠ K 10 6
♡ 6 5 4 3
◇ K J 9 6 5
♣ 10

West:
♠ 7
♡ A K 10 9 6 2
◇ A 8 2
♣ 9 3 2

East:
♠ Q J 5 4
♡ J 7
◇ 10 7 4 3
♣ K Q 8

South:
♠ A 9 8 3 2
◇ Q
♡ Q
♣ A J 7 6 5 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠ (1)	Double (2)	2 ♠ (3)	Pass
4 ♠ (4)	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) One club is the better bid on this hand so that the spade suit can be shown over an anticipated diamond or heart response. The hand is opened rather than passed originally because of the distribution.

(2) This hand is on the borderline between a double and a simple overcall of two hearts. Neither bid could be criticized.

(3) A semi-shut-out raise over the intervening double. As a matter of fact, with the North hand I would not particularly fear letting the opponents bid.

(4) Optimistic, but not extravagantly so. South expected to find four trumps in dummy and realized that control of the trump suit would mean the making of the hand.

West opened the heart King and continued the suit, Mr. Malowan trumping in his own hand.

He immediately gave up a diamond to West's Ace and that player led still another round of hearts, East discarding a club and Mr. Malowan trumping.

The Ace of clubs was led and a club trumped with dummy's low spade. Two diamond tricks were cashed on which clubs were discarded.

Then another diamond was led and ruffed with the eight of spades—thus effectively preventing West from overruffing.

Another club was led from the South hand and to prevent the certain overruff was trumped with the spade King.

The lead from the dummy became immaterial.

Actually, another diamond was chosen and when East (who incidentally had been forced to helplessly underruff on the previous trick) split his trump equals, a club was nonchalantly discarded from the South hand.

At the 12th trick East had to lead away from the spade King, and the nine and Ace of spades in declarer's hand won the last two tricks. Thus only three tricks were lost—a heart, a diamond and a spade.

BIRTHDAY CORSAGE

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am attending a dance with a young lady friend at one of our leading ballrooms. This is to be an informal dance. Now then, the day of the dance happens to be her birthday.

What I want to know is, would it be proper for me to get her a corsage to wear? If so, should it be a shoulder one? Is there any particular kind of flowers used? DICK.

By all means make this gallant gesture of sending a corsage for the young lady to wear to the dance on her birthday. Practically all girls like gardenias, and they are harmonious with all shades and types of dresses.

Send the box of flowers to the young lady's home so that they will arrive late in the afternoon of the dance. Enclose your card with a birthday greeting written on it.

LOTS OF FUN

"Until last summer, my friends hardly ever invited me to their parties," Elsie R. told her cousin. "But then Dad put in our telephone and it's been wonderful ever since. I'm not left out any more."

"Most of these parties, I've learned, are got together in a hurry, and so they rely on the telephone. It's lots of fun . . . I don't know how we ever got along without a telephone." And the whole family enjoys it.

This is only one of the many reasons why people value their telephones. A telephone offers you protection, security, convenience, and peace of mind, as well as friendships . . . and often it helps to hold jobs or to get work.

To share these benefits, call your local business office. New England Telephone and Telegraph Company.

MADGE FEELS LEE WILL BE A MENACE

CHAPTER 273

IT WAS at least a minute before my father answered Lillian's query as to what Hugh Grantland thought of Lee Chow's sanity.

"As nearly as I can deduce the thing," he said at last, bringing back his eyes from infinity to Lillian's face, "Hugh has feared that Lee Chow was perfectly sane, but hoped that he was mad."

"I can readily see the reason for that hope upon Hugh's part," Lillian commented. "He and Lee Chow have been close friends, companions, for years. It would be a terrible thing for Hugh to realize that the man to whom he has owed his life upon more than one occasion was a criminal, a murderer and diabolical plotter. It is hard enough for him to deal with the things Lee Chow has done, without the added burden of believing that they were evolved deliberately from a sane brain. Therefore I think he is trying hard to believe that his friend is insane, even in the face of the man's clever shamming."

My father drew out his watch, looked at it and sat erect.

"The fifteen minutes Hugh named are almost up," he said. "I must go back to the room where he is guarding Lee Chow."

"Let the [illegible] this time," he said sternly. "You are to lock this door [illegible] here until either Hugh or I come to release you."

"Aye, aye, Captain," Lillian made a little mouth at him. Then he went quickly out of the room, and Lillian as quickly followed him to the door, and turned the key in the lock.

"And [illegible] that," she said, returning [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

[illegible]

[illegible] carefully [illegible] years. But I can't help believing that he is perfectly ruthless where himself is concerned. And when I think of his ambushing Dicky, and how nearly he came to killing him, why, I could strangle him with my bare hands."

I held them out in front of me, but they were trembling so that I could not keep them steady. Lillian [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

"Don't you think I know?" she said softly. "All this academic talk about sanity or madness is very well, but in the meantime it's your husband that was ambushed by an assassin, and escaped being killed only by the mercy of God. Nobody can blame you for feeling that neither Dicky nor you nor yet your children will be safe until this Oriental with the queer views is put safely away, where he can't indulge his fantastic theories. Nevertheless, and darling also notwithstanding, I wish you'd keep an open mind on the subject for a few minutes, or hours, or days longer."

I faced her, suddenly breathless.

"What do you mean?" I asked. "Have they told you something that they haven't told me?"

"Not a thing," she answered.

Mrs. Lillie Thompson of Bard, California is 47 years old. She was so nervous and rundown she could not do her housework. Had headaches and spent many days in bed. Much better since she took the Vegetable Compound.

Was Dizzy and Nervous
Evelyn Kelley is a threader in a lace mill at Pawtucket, Rhode Island. She found it very tiring work. She had nervous headaches and dizzy spells. Four bottles of the Vegetable Compound relieved all her troubles.

When Your Daughter Comes to Womanhood
"Mrs. Maude Funkhauser of Worthington, Indiana was worried about her daughter Georgianna, age 17. She was pale and tired all the time. The Vegetable Compound gave her more pep. She is well and strong again now.

Feels Full of Pep Now
Velma Tracy of Greystone, Rhode Island is a domestic. She got weak and tired from so much hard work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound gave her new strength. Her nerves are 100% better and she has lots more pep.

Had Fainting Spells
Mildred Dickerman of Nebo, Illinois used to have such cramps that she often had to be carried home from school. The Vegetable Compound relieved her. She wishes she had known about it long before she did.

Tired, Worn Out, Had No Ambition
Mrs. Joseph Lefebvre of Summit Hill, Pennsylvania was all rundown and felt miserable. Since taking the Vegetable Compound she has gained in health and pep, has a good appetite and is enjoying life more than she has for years.

Good For Weak Women
Mrs. Betty Smith of Cincinnati, Ohio spent four months in bed after her baby was born. Was too weak to walk across the floor. Took three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was soon up and doing her work.

For Hysterical Women
Mrs. Rose Zecka of West New York, New Jersey, was ill for months. Got down to 94 pounds and was ready to give up hope. Took the Vegetable Compound for three months. Appetite improved. Soon able to go back to work.

"All The Fun Was Gone Out of Life"
Says Mrs. Matushek of Chicago. She was nervous, had terrible headaches, was short-breathed and much swollen. The Vegetable Compound worked wonders in her case. She thinks it is a great medicine at Change of Life.

Rather than have all of the city's snow removal contractors appear at City Hall in person to swear that they have complied with all the terms of their contracts, Public Works Commissioner Christopher J. Craven today requested them to send the sworn statements by mail.

He also asked for lists of all laborers, engaged in clearing away the recent snow, who have not yet been paid.

Statements and lists were requested at the order of Mayor Mansfield following the unexplained publication yesterday of an advertisement asking that complaints against snow removal contractors be taken to local NRA headquarters.

GILDED

Eyelashes

THE LATEST

American women are more beautiful than those in Europe, but the Europeans appear more beautiful it was declared today in Boston by Mlle. Mala Rubenstein, beauty specialist.

She explained her statement by saying that European women do more with themselves and make the most of what they have been given.

"But what is more, Boston women have the most beautiful skin in the world," said Mlle. Rubinstein who, with her aunt, Mme. Helena Rubinstein, is considered a high priestess in the feminine world of beauty. "It is beautiful and fragile, but, like porcelain, it has to be cared for so that it will not crack."

Even though they have an artificial appearance, gilded eyelashes add that dash which Boston women need, Mlle. Rubinstein declared.

"Artificiality is accepted," she said. "What must be avoided is the hard look."

There will be more rouge and less [illegible] used this spring, she predicted, with [illegible] shades favored. She said:

"Men pretend to like naturalness and a face shining from soap and water. It sounds well, but don't believe it. Who are the women who most easily obtain escorts? They are the well-groomed and stunningly made-up women."

CHURCH FIRE

Set in 5 Places

Fire that caused $1500 damage in the new Immaculate Conception Church, Winchester, was set in five places, state fire inspectors determined today.

The church was saved from further damage by prompt discovery of the blaze by Miss D[illegible] O'Melia, 18, who lives opposite the church in Sheridan circle.

Police said they believed the fire was set by boys. Most of the damage was in the altar and a confessional.

ON STAND

Month in Bank Case

Few persons could imagine going through the same ordeal, but when Harold M. Curtis, ex-treasurer of the Brockton Trust Company, took the witness stand in federal court today, he had been at it nearly a month.

Curtis was describing the transactions of his bank after having been taken over by the Federal National Bank of Boston. The Brockton bank is one of four Federal National affiliates suing for $3,200,000 for alleged misuse of funds intrusted to the closed Boston bank.

COCKROACH

'Banqueters' Jailed

Archangell, U. S. S. R., Feb. 20 (AP). Five persons, including M. Sosnin, former secretary of the Communist party committee at Isakogorzky Harbor, were sentenced to prison today for the part they played in a "cockroach banquet."

The five men were accused of forcing employes of a restaurant to eat soup containing cockroaches after a customer complained of finding one in his food.

EQUIPOISE IN RACE, TOO

TO TEAM WITH HIGH GLEE SATURDAY

By Universal Service

Santa Anita Park, Cal., Feb. 20—Twenty Grand is a sure starter in the Santa Anita handicap, it was stated today by William Brennan, Greentree stable trainer.

Brennan was highly satisfied with the way the old champion performed in his trial race which he won through the disqualification of Equipoise.

And inasmuch as he came out of the race unquestionably sound, Twenty Grand will be sent after the $100,000 purse on Saturday.

Gillie, winner of the $20,000 Derby last Saturday in the colors of the Greentree stable, is not likely to start in the handicap.

However, Brennan refuses to declare him out of the race this early, in case something should happen to Twenty Grand.

The Santa Anita Derby winner may be shipped to Miami for the Florida Derby next month. He will be pointed for many of the year's rich three-year-old classics because of his sudden improvement.

GET OUT THERE

Trainer Tom Healey reported today that Equipoise came out of Monday's race in great condition and is ready to run one of the best races of his career.

Equipoise will run coupled with High Glee as the entry of Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, the intention being to have High Glee force the pace.

Norman Church's Riskulus came up with a bruised heel after his last workout, after going a mile and a quarter in 2 04 1-5.

Four of the handicap contenders worked the full distance. Head Play went a very impressive mile and a quarter in 2 04 2-5, doing the three quarters in 1.12 and the mile in 1 37 2-5.

Boys' Club Natators at Y.M.C.A.

Six members of the Boys' Club of Boston are to compete Friday night at the Boston Y. M. C. A. pool when the Boston Swimming Association holds its annual open swimming meet.

None of the entrants will seek the national junior 50 yard championship, in which sterling competition is expected, but they will figure prominently in the distribution of the medals in the other events.

Jerry Murnane, former N. E. champion, is in the 100 yard breast stroke, while Albert Eaton and Allan McGillvary are in the 150 yard back stroke and Philip Medlery, Richard Mason and Henry Schermerhorn will be in the 100 yard free style.

M'CLUSKEY SUSPENDED

MUNDY OUT WITH A.A.U.

EXCHANGE BLOWS AT N. Y. MEET

By Associated Press

New York, Feb. 20—Because he failed to notify the Amateur Athletic Union of a change in address, Joe McCluskey, former Fordham track star and a member of the 1932 Olympic team, faced today the possibility of being ineligible to defend his 3000-meter steeplechase title in the national indoor track and field meet at Madison Square Garden Saturday night.

McCluskey and Paul Mundy of the Millrose A. A. were ordered to appear before the registration committee to answer charges of a fight at the Millrose games February 2. Both failed to appear and drew automatic suspensions from John J. Deignan, chairman of the committee.

The national steeplechase champion said he failed to receive the notice and on investigation found that it had been sent to his old address. Mundy also said he had not received his notice.

"That does not excuse McCluskey, however," said Dan Ferris, secretary of the A. A. U. "All athletes are required to notify the A. A. U. of any change in address."

The two athletes were turned in by an official for "conduct unbecoming a gentleman." McCluskey was said to have taken a poke at Mundy during the running of the two-mile race, claiming that the latter consistently stepped on his heels.

Both will have a chance to clear themselves Thursday night, however, when the registration committee will hold another meeting.

"Mundy had been hitting my heels, following close behind me, in a number of races," said McCluskey. "I warned him against it before the Millrose meet, but he kept it up and I guess I just got sore. There was no fight in the dressing room."

Mundy, who is near-sighted, although he wears heavy glasses, was said by friends to have misjudged the distance that separated him from the former Fordham runner, although he planned to dog McCluskey's footsteps.

NORTHWESTERN

Chicago O. K.

Chicago, Feb. 20 (INS)—Renewal of football relations between the University of Chicago and Northwestern University today appeared to be a probability for 1936. The two Western Conference schools have not met on the gridiron since 1926.

Coach Clark Shaughnessy of Chicago, together with a number of his athletes, announced themselves in favor of the plan for resumption voiced by the Daily Northwestern, student publication of the Evanston school.

Denies Report of Kirkwood

Brookfield, Ct., Feb. 19 (AP)—Charges made at Adelaide, Australia, by Joe Kirkwood, Australian-born American golf professional, that the Australian golf executives had "cold-shouldered" Gene Sarazen, causing the former American and British open king to cut short a tour ofthe Antipodes, were denied by Sarazen at his home here tonight.

Sarazen, who returned from New York early tonight, said: "I thoroughly enjoyed my visit to Australia." He said he would return here within two or three years.

Long Jack Portland Stars In Bruins 3-1 Victory

EX-OLYMPIC HIGH JUMPER SCORES ON SOLO DASH

By Bill Grimes

Long Jack Portland, who was taken up from the Cubs when Manager Frank Patrick announced that Bert McInenly had been injured in Chicago, was a very important factor in the Bruins' 3-1 victory over Les Canadiens at the Garden.

True, the B's were leading, 2 to 1, when Long Jack beat Wilfie Cude, but still his tally was responsible for the Frenchmen lowering themselves to the height of a snake's belly . . .

When the former Canadian Olympic high jumper started his solo, only those who had followed his career with the Cubs closely held any hope that he would score . . . Long Jack broke down through center ice and cut sharply to his right when he hit the French defense . . . He wound around Carson and lifted a back hand shot into Les Canadiens' net for a goal that took the pressure off the Bruins . . .

And before getting off the subject of Long Jack Portland, I wish to state that, in my opinion, he is one of the best defense prospects on the Bruin roster . . .

The Bruins are now in second place, only a full game behind the Rangers, who came from behind to beat the St. Louis Eagles, 2 to 1, in New York . . . Now that the Rangers are in first place, Manager Lester Patrick will begin his annual jockeying stunt . . . The Blue Shirts do not look favorably on tackling the Maple Leafs in a best three out of five series, for the N. H. L. title.

It's the Stanley Cup or the alley for the Rangers . . . They prefer to play a couple of home and home total goals to count series with Maroons and the winners of the third place first round . . . Personally, I believe the Rangers will be more successful if they keep traveling at top speed for if they let down they may not be able to click again.

One thing commendable about Red Horner is that he does not confine his fighting to Toronto . . . During the first period in Montreal Red took on Cy Wentworth and Baldy Northcott and was in the penalty box for 17 out of the first 20 minutes . . . The Maroons are a great club but they have been unable to do any business with the Maple Leafs this season.

There's Marty Barry, Jr., now on the Bruins' reserve list, which has taken a load off Papa Barry's shoulders . . . Bert McInenly will be out of the Bruins lineup for a week.

Long Jack Portland contributed an all important solo goal which not only relieved the pressure, but was a gem.

Hey, Jockey

STEWART TEAMS WITH SANDS FOR WINNER

By Bill Grimes

By coming from behind to beat Les Canadiens, 3 to 1, Bruins moved into full possession of second place in the American Division and at the same time kept pace with New York Rangers, who, by virtue of a third period spurt, hung a 2 to 1 defeat on St. Louis Eagles.

The veteran Aurel Joliat put Canadiens out in front late in the opening period on a three-man attack with Pit Lepine and Wildor Larochelle, and the Flying Frenchmen retained their lead until half way through the middle stanza.

CONNIE'S

Son Given TRYOUT

By Associated Press

Philadelphia, Feb. 20—A plan to see if the toga of coaching players for the baseball diamond will fit his son is in Connie Mack's mind today as the old master journeyed toward the spring training camp of the Athletics.

Connie and President Thomas S. Shibe left at midnight with the vanguard of the team for the Ft. Myers training camp, and just before leaving the veteran manager said he wants to see if his son, Connie Jr., is a "chip off the old block."

"He'll get a chance," said Mack, "and if he makes good I'll be happy and proud. But his future in baseball is up to him and he'll have to prove his merit the same as any other boy.

"I have made it plain to my boy that he can't succeed in baseball because he's the son of a man who has spent 50-odd years in game. He's got to have what it takes."

In a happy frame of mind, Mack said he believed the Athletics "have a chance to go somewhere."

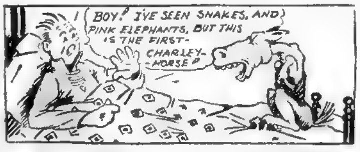
Savant Takes Photos of Villainous Charleyhorse!



BOY! I'VE SEEN SNAKES, AND PINK ELEPHANTS, BUT THIS IS THE FIRST-CHARLEY-HORSE!

Baseball players have suffered from charleyhorse, but have never laid eyes on one. Now, however, this common ailment of athletes has actually been photogrpahed by the Marine Biological Laboratory at Woods Hole, and the pictures show that the charleyhorse is a biter rather than a kicker.

Under a microscope, magnified 600 times, the bundles of muscle fibers can be seen to break, disintegrate and disappear like wisps of hay at feeding time.

The only remendy, apparently, is rest, which permits new fibers to grow as replacement of those lost. If enough of the muscle cells are left, an original fiber will regenerate from those. If not, the nearby tissue will supply a new muscle thread.

The technique for visualizing these living muscles was developed by Dr. Carl Caskey Speidel of the University of Virginia Medical School, using transparent tails of frog tadpoles, which contain the same bundles of fibers as do the legs of men.

AUSTEN LAKE on

Dog's Day The Dog Doesn't Want

Austen Lake

THE SHOW-DOG EXHIBITORS, who display their orchid-pups at Mechanics Building tomorrow, have a lofty contempt for the dog-race men who have just won their pari-mutuel sheepskins from the State Race Commission.

The show-dog professional professes to love a dog for the flirt of its tail, the liquid-brown of its eye and its red flannel tongue. But the dog-race man is said to love a dog only for its sordidly commercial significance, including its elastic legs, its whip-handle body and what profits it can earn on the sanded saucer.

I don't know which professional type of dog person I like best. Both raise their pets for market, and I question whether the dogs enjoy the boredom of sitting on their sterns for three whole days and being gawped at or hand patted as much as the slinky weasel types like to shoot out of wooden cages after a wooden rabbit with an electric light bulb for a tail.

The pro dog-show man sells the divine qualities of his pet, which is its spiritual companionship and loving faith, without asking a testimonial of good character from the new owner.

And though the race dog man seldom sells his stake runners, he carefully breeds out their natural high intelligence so that they become little more than canine robots and never discover the shoddy fraud of the mechanical bunny with the incandescent rump.

Lucky Alley Mongrels

I HAVE HEARD WRESTLING promoters say that nervous systems of their mat athletes is so dimmed down that they do not suffer like ordinary humans and therefore deserve no pity for their hard life.

It sounds reasonable, and I suppose the same philosophy pertains to the slinky race whippets which never experience the doggy delights of rooting in somebody's swill pail, or the moist odors of leaf-mold in search of wood mice.

They never know the snug warmth of a rug beneath the kitchen stove. Or the mutual loyalty, that amounts to religion, between a boy-master and itself.

The career whippets spend their lives in cells behind wire screens, except for brief exercise periods chained to their jailors. They are fed on starvation rations of oatmeal gruel or liver slivers and, before race time, are tantalized with sniffs of raw rabbit's skin.

Well, the professional exhibitor's attitude toward his dogs is nearly as impersonal, and, in the show ring, he will reach down and snatch his mutt by its stubby tail, jerking it to a conventional, artist's model pose for the cold eye of the judge-of-breed.

Its name will be Maxamilian Blue Boy Light o' Heather, with a price on his head, and he will live a fictitious, artificial life, sireing or whelping litters of soft, fluffy infants which are wholesaled off to distemper-infested pet-shops.

So, the more I consider, the more I doubt that flea-eaten alley mongrels who live free-booting, unconstrained lives realize what lucky hounds they are.

Money-Mortification

CLARKE GRIFFITH, owner of the Washington Senators, is suffering an embarrassment of riches.

Having received a quarter of a million dollars, and a $20,000 player (Lary) in exchange for his son-in law, player-manager, Joe Cronin, he now finds that nine of his regulars wish to share the stake in increased salary awards.

Pitchers Alex McColl, Al Thomas, Earl Whitehill, Jack Burke, Jack Russell and Walter Stewart, four-fifths of his pitching staff, and Infielders Buddy Myer, Joe Kuhel and Lynn Lary want larger slices of fruit cake.

"Depression" is Griffith's stock answer, pointing to the hoodooed and unfruitful 1934 season.

"Says which?" chorus the malcontented nine, indicating the $250,000 lollypop which fell from Tom Yawkey's sugar tree.

Hockey's Bull's-Eye

LET ANY OTHER NATIONAL Hockey League defenseman wrap his stick over an opponent's noggin or jolt off his body bolts against the boards, and rival managers will sit tight with a patient, pussy cat smile. ("It goes with the game").

But let Eddie Shore, the Bruins' Man O' War, so much as nudge an opponent a rugged, he-man nudge, and the rival manager rocks back on his heels, gives off a steamboat yell and insists that Shore be jailed for atrocious assault.

The Montreal Maroons wanted Shore punished for Jimmy Ward's unavoidable accident, and now the St. Louis Eagles ask redress for Bill Cowley's in-the line-of-duty injury.

B. U. Mans the Life Boats

BOSTON UNIVERSITY'S UNERRING nose for trouble has smelled up another nuisance. No other New England college's athletics has turned up such a rich record of riot, roughhouse, comic opera mutiny and executive bunglings.

Now the Student Athletic Council asks the removal of Dr. John Harmon and Dr. Frederick Rand Rogers, the esthete athletic lights who proposed to lead the college out of sports darkness with policies of loving kindness, player control and spiritual mathematics.

This is nothing new. I recall that B. U. alumni demanded a probe of George V. Brown's administration, as the first of a series, so that faculty, students and alumni have been firing cross volleys at their own shadows for years. I say, as I have said before, that the peculiar chemistry of B. U.'s student life is not suited to intercollegiate sport, and that it should resolve into intramural sports of a class, fraternity and club type.

Its male students are generally sons of hard-working, modest salaried families, and usually have to help to earn their way, shuttling back and forth between home and their downtown school.

Originally, when athletic teams were organized on an informal basis, with shabby, self-provided equipment and gypsy practice fields, the needs of the few athletic minded boys was comfortably met.

There were no mutinies, no food revolts, no yells for investigations or faculty intervention.

Not until B. U. sports were inflated beyond the normal stretch of its skin did trouble start.

A new athletic plant, an over-scientific central control, student and alumni councils, were the rocks of theory on which B. U.'s ship of sport has cracked up.

JACK DEMPSEY

JACK DEMPSEY is still the master diplomat. I attended the dinner which Jack Curley tendered Dan O'Mahoney, Irish heavyweight wrestling champion, at Jack Dempsey's new restaurant following his victory over Ray Steele at the New York Garden.

O'Mahoney sat at a table in the center of the restaurant. He was surrounded by editors of the Irish newspapers in New York.

Hundreds of Danno's admirers occupied seats at other tables in the spacious restaurant. Dempsey appeared to be everywhere. He acted the part of master of ceremonies in presenting visitors to O'Mahoney.

"Danno is the most colorful wrestler I have ever seen," said Dempsey. "I offered him $50,000 to sign a contract as a boxer, but he refused my offer. He has his heart set on winning the wrestling championship."

Dempsey insisted that the youthful Irish champion have the spotlight on him at all times.

"All I ask is that Danno eat in my place whenever he comes to New York," declared Dempsey. "Then I'll be sure of a sellout."

RING LICENSE ALLOWED TO LAPSE

By Associated Press

New York, Feb. 20—Implying that it will welcome the refusal of American boxing authorities to license Joseph (Jack) Doyle, Ireland's latest gift to heavyweight pugilism, the British Board of Boxing Control has notified Edward C. Foster of Providence, president of the National Boxing Association, that Doyle no longer holds a British permit and is in default of payment in a fistic lawsuit.

Meanwhile [illegible] Foster, who has [illegible] today the information received from Charles F. Donmall, general secretary of the B. B. B. of C.

"As no doubt you are aware," Donmall wrote to Foster, "Doyle in his contest with Jack Petersen for the heavyweight championship of Great Britain, was disqualified in the second round for fouling his opponent. As a result of Doyle's disqualification, he brought—through what is known in this country as 'his next dear friend,' he, Doyle, being under 21—an action against the B. B. B. of C.

"The outcome of the litigation was that the B. B. B. of C. were successful and were awarded costs amounting to £541.13.9d. In addition £240 judgment was given against him, making in all £781.13.9d.

"Doyle has allowed 'his next friend' to go bankrupt as he, Doyle, has failed to put up the money to meet these liabilities. The B. B. B. of C. are therefore still awaiting payment. We thought you ought to have this information before you if Doyle applies for a license to box under your jurisdiction."

In reply to a direct inquiry from Foster as to whether it wanted Doyle suspended in this country, the B. B. B. of C. advised only that Doyle had allowed his license, issued annually, to lapse and made no application for renewal.

JUSTA JANE IS SET FOR WIN IN SECOND

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 20—Cathop, second to Golden Fate only a few days back, appears to stand head and shoulders over the small but select field opposing him in the six furlongs of the fourth race here tomorrow afternoon.

ZOWIE, a recent winner, was favored by one of the outside positions. The Headley miss whirled three panels in .35 3-5 for her final. BANDERILLA'S last race was not at all bad considering that she was bothered badly during the final furlong. BLACK BESS is the clocker's [illegible]

8 Mad Kate	x104	Rosen	20-1
5 Kacky	109	McManus	20-1
1 Payoff	x109	G. Watson	20-1

JUSTA JANE ran a whale of a race to place to Epical earlier in the meeting. A duplicate of that effort would likely result in brackets for the Justa Farm color-bearer. SLAVE scratched out of yesterday's card to await this spot and shapes up as the main danger. SANTA BARFLY has worked very fast.

Winged Flight, Elbandido, Starry Night

THIRD RACE—$800, claiming, three-year-olds, maidens, seven furlongs:

2 Justa Jane	x13	Haines	3-1
5 Slave	x109	McManus	3-1
1 Santa Barfly	113	Stefren	6-1
12 Chile Ship	109	Gilbert	8-1

13 Peebie Hal	x09	McDermott	15-1
9 Daffy	x104	Bryson	20-1
10 Najort	114	S. Renick	20-1

WINGED FLIGHT figures to be along in time to head a field of this sort. ELBANDIDO, a fleet trick from the barrier, may outlast STARRY NIGHT for the short end. The latter has turned in several excellent trials and may come up a "good thing."

Cathop, St. Stephens, West Main

FOURTH RACE—$1000, claiming, three-year-olds and up, six furlongs.

6 Cathop	113	Corbett	1-1
1 St. Stephen	x115	Hanford	3-1
2 West Main	x115	G. Watson	5-1

4 Bright Haven	114	Merritt	[illegible]
3 S[illegible]kin	115	Gilbert	10-1
5 Golden Spur	110	Seabo	10-1

CATHOP shapes up as a standout in this number. If anything upsets my dope and hands him a drubbing it will likely be ST. STEPHENS. The latter was a cracking good winner last time out. WEST MAIN figures to head the others.

Tearout, Dokas, Hardware

FIFTH RACE—$1000, allowances, three-year-olds, seven furlongs.

4 Tearout	105	Hanka	10-1
1 Dokas	113	J. Renick	3-1
5 Hardware	113	Gilbert	2-1
6 Boston Brook	108	R. Watson	1-1
3 Brindle	108	Bryson	[illegible]
2 High Image	111	Stout	8-1

TEAROUT was all but left at the post in his last start. In front of that the Terry colt turned in a handy victory over a clever field. DOKAS is the clocker's tip. HARDWARE looks next best.

Golden Fate, Black Buddy, Ladfield

SIXTH RACE—$1000, allowances, four-year-olds, seven furlongs.

5 Golden Fate	104	Merritt	3-1
2 Black Buddy	114	Porter	3-1
4 Ladfield	116	Wright	4-1
3 Quel Jeu	113	Winters	3-1
1 Fide[illegible]	98	G. Watson	10-1

GOLDEN FATE figures next best under the weight arrangements in this affair. The Alexander color-bearer is coming up off a clever victory and is tossed in under a feather of 104 pounds. BLACK BUDDY, the main danger, sulked in his last race. LADFIELD for the remainder.

Brass Monkey, Limbus, Big Show

SEVENTH RACE—$800, claiming, four-year-olds and up, one and 3-16 miles.

4 Brass Monkey	x105	Rainey	2-1
1 Limbus	x111	Lynch	4-1
6 Big Show	111	Wright	8-1
5 Old Judge	x108	Bryson	6-1
2 Roman Pal	114	Corbett	6-1
3 Ahmed	111	Porter	4-1

BRASS MONKEY has only to run his race in order to grace the winner's circle. The Light Brigade colt is well fitted by all the conditions. LIMBUS drubbed Caw Caw and other shifty ones over the same distance a few days back. BIG SHOW is a possibility.

Broadway to Welcome Babe Home After Tour

By Pat Robinson
International News Service Sports Writer

New York, Feb. 20—Broadway moves down the bay today to greet that noted actor, linguist, orientalist and baseballist, George Herman Ruth . . .

The Bustin' Bambino is due to arrive on the S. S. Manhattan and the Babe Ruth marching and chowder society will be there in force. However, it is worthy of note that among those decidedly not present may be mentioned Col. Jake Ruppert, from whom the Babe has drawn a million in pay checks, Cousin Egbert Barrow, dispenser of the said checks and Joe McCarthy, manager of the Yankees, whose job Babe would like to have but which he'll never, never get.

The Babe Ruth marching and Chowder club will supply the banzai which are very pleasant on the ear but the colonel supplies the tinkle of the dollars and that's the kind of music most interesting to the Babe.

The colonel knows just how much he is going to offer the Babe to play ball and he's determined that Babe can take it or leave it. Lou Gehrig, who signed his contract yesterday for a reputed $30,000, is among those who believe the Babe will take what is offered and like it.

Guesses on how much that may be range up to $25,000 and if the Babe can get that much for pinch-hitting and playing a few games here and there, why, that's just so much velvet to a man who is rated at half a million.

Here is the official Yankee viewpoint:

"Ruth has been good to the game, of course, but the same hasn't done badly by him. He can retire gracefully, if he likes, and perhaps, for a year or two, make some money from radio and writing.

"But the public quickly forgets, and if Babe is wise he'll sign to play and await developments. He'll never get a chance to manage this club, for the colonel doesn't think he's the man for the job. If he did he would not have given the job, first to Bob Shawkey after Miller Huggins died, and then to Joe McCarthy when Bob faded from the picture.

"Suppose the White Sox, for example, are sunk deep in the cellar by July and are yelling for a new manager. What more natural than that Babe should be drafted for the job? He'd still be in the pub-

Dog Show Opens Tomorrow

An imposing array of 1225 leading thoroughbreds of the canine world will bark out their annual welcome to Boston tomorrow at Mechanics Building when the 23rd annual Eastern Dog Club exhibition swings into action.

The entry list, which calls for the appearance of 79 breeds, has only been surpassed twice in the history of the eastern classic, but never has there been such an outstanding group of blooded dogs as will pass before the 38 judges the next two days.

Drawing entries from all sections of the country, this year's eastern show rates as the greatest, and competition seldom witnessed in the show ring is expected to take place.

Ribbon winners from the recent Westminster, Newark and New Haven shows are ready to defend their laurels against the 41 champions who are returning to defend titles annexed here last season.

The two-day show calls for three judging sessions each day, with the morning classes entering the rings at 10.30 o'clock. Afternoon competition starts at 2 o'clock while night sessions get underway at 8.30. The special feature listed this year, that of a thoroughly trained Irish setter going through his field paces is scheduled each day at 1 o'clock and 7 o'clock.

Massachusetts, always a leader in the dog world, will be represented by a spectacular group of champions which are anxious and ready to meet the invading titlists.

U. S. SKATERS At St. John

St. John, N. B., Feb. 20 (AP)—With three entries from the United States, 73 speed skaters will compete in the North American indoor championship meet here tonight and tomorrow.

The United States will be represented by Allan Potts of New York, who was recently selected as a member of the 1936 Olympic team; Lamar Ottsen, St. Louis, and Eddie Wedge, Detroit.

Campbell Waits On Wind Blower

BEACH UNFIT FOR TRIAL

DARE DEVIL ANXIOUS TO SET RECORD

By Davis J. Walsh
International News Service Sports Editor

Daytona Beach, Fla., Feb. 20 (INS)—Around the corner from the hotel stands the huge and gangling instrument of destiny—or death—known as Sir Malcolm Campbell's Bluebird.

It cost $100,000 in the original and, with rebuilding, probably $30,000 more and it hasn't been on the ground in a week.

Within a split-second, as the Bluebird hurtles through space, is the remains of a very fine beach. At least, it was a very fine beach two years ago when Campbell and the Bluebird went 272.108 miles an hour to a world's record. But it may never be again.

It's so bad in fact, that Sir Malcolm would do better to leave the Bluebird where it is and hire himself a rocket. He would make faster time driving down the tracks from Penn station to Manhattan transfer. He'll stay until March, he said today, waiting for something better, the remark indicating that he might ultimately withdraw in disgust, but I doubt it.

Hotels Profit

He's hooked too much now. So is everybody else, except the hotel people and the mechanics who draw down important wages and nowadays don't even have to get out of their flannels and into their overalls.

That's only part of the "rap," of course. There's the group of A A A officials whose salaries and expenses continue, even when nothing else does. I mean that the only thing that seems able to run around here now is the bills.

Untold and, at present, uncounted tens of thousands—untold because everybody avoids the topic something like a joke in doubtful taste and uncounted because counting here is considered unrefined except behind your back—must go into this noble experiment before this titled Englishman can go out there on the sands and either break a record or his social neck. The bill, frankly, might be anywhere from $100,000 to a quarter of a million.

The tip off on the beach, naturally, came yesterday when Dave Evans couldn't, or wouldn't, drive his Diesel over 65 miles an hour through the measured mile, although the machine was gaited to 140 miles an hour.

Walsh Takes Chance

Almost immediately thereafter I was driven over the course in an ordinary stock car at between 40 to 50 miles an hour and, at one point, I almost wore the windshield for a collar.

The point is that they haven't had a northeast wind here in weeks and, without a northeast wind they might as well shovel this beach into box cars and give it back to the Indians.

San Francisco, Feb. 20 (INS)—An audit of gate receipts of the four-round benefit match last week between Max Baer and Stanley Poreda revealed today that Mrs. Frankie Campbell, widow of a San Francisco fighter who was accidently killed in a bout with Baer five years ago, will receive $10,500.

Half of the purse will be placed in a trust fund for Mrs. Campbell's 5-year-old son.

Red Horner In Cooler 17 Minutes

By Associated Press

New York, Feb. 20—Make way all you famed "bad men" of hockey for flame-thatched Reginald Horner of the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Horner, the most penalized player of the National Hockey League in the past two seasons and of the current campaign, may not have the reputation for violence that Eddie Shore, Ching Johnson, Hooley Smith and others earned in their rougher days a few years ago, or of some of their predecessors in the days when a "hickory axe" was the accepted weapon of ice warfare, but his penalty mark will be hard to challenge.

"Red" spent 17 minutes on the fence during a rough and tumble game in which the Leafs trimmed the Montreal Maroons 3 to 1 last night. Early in the first period he checked Herb Cain into the boards and was sent off for two minutes.

Cy Wentworth of the Maroons came in with swinging fists to add to this punishment and after a free-for-all both drew major penalties in addition to Horner's minor. Almost as soon as he left the cooler, Red became embroiled with Baldy Northcott and as a second offender was set down for ten minutes. A minor banishment followed in the third frame.

The night's important action was concentrated in the American Division, where three clubs are struggling for the lead. The New York Rangers held the top place by a two-point margin when they came from behind and beat the cellar-dwelling St. Louis Eagles 2 to 1.

The Boston Bruins moved into second place, breaking a tie with the idle Chicago Blackhawks by stumbling through to a 3 to 1 victory over the Montreal Canadiens despite ragged play.

MAKO May Go TO HUNGARY

By Universal Service

Los Angeles, Feb. 20—Gene Mako, the University of Southern California's 18-year-old hope for American Davis cup honors this year, today confirmed reports that "Hungarian sportsmen have made overtures to him, offering him a governmental position in Budapest, expenses and tuition in the Royal Hungarian University if he will transfer abroad this spring."

Should the young Trojan decide to accept the offer from his native country, it would eliminate one of the United States' most promising Davis cup prospects and transfer one of the world's greatest doubles players from the American ranks to Hungary.

It would break up the team of Mako and Donald Budge, the red-headed (Oakland, Cal.) sensation who, with Gene, holds the United States clay court doubles crown.

RED ROLFE Signs

Rep. Granfield Ex-Bench Warmer for Reds

Big League Chance Saddened Infield Flash

By Associated Press

Washington, Feb. 19—Representative William Granfield of Massachusetts once was a rookie ball player wearing out his pants on the bench for the Cincinnati Reds.

He was blue, as are scores of ambitious youngsters every season, but for an entirely different reason.

Granfield was downcast because he had signed a major league contract. When the glamour of a big show career had faded, the former Notre Dame star regretted he hadn't gone straight into the practice of law.

So he refused to report the next year when ordered to Nashville, in the Southern Association. The possibility of him continuing as a professional player ended there.

Granfield played third base at the South Bend school in the days when Knute Rockne was a football star. He was signed by a Cincinnati scout while an undergraduate.

He enjoyed the contacts he made while a bench warmer with the Reds, for Joe Tinker was manager, Kling was the catcher and "Three-Finger" Brown was one of the best hurlers. Granfield grew up with Rabbit Maranville of the Braves and has known Leo Durocher of the Cardinals for years.

While at Notre Dame he played with Cy Williams, later a big league home run ace.

He recalled vividly a game with Arkansas, in which first one and then the other team went ahead with heavy hitting every few innings.

"The score was tied 10—10 as he went into the eleventh inning," he remembered. "Arkansas got three runs in its half. We loaded the bases and Williams banged out a double to tie the score. Then I singled and Cy tallied with the winning counter. That was easily the most thrilling game of my career."

LEAGUE BOWLING MARK BROKEN

1521 Record

FERRY, PEDEN COMBINE FOR 697 TOTAL

By Ed Cogswell

Hinkley & Woods, of Insurance, may be hanging along in seventh place in the league standing, but that they have a good wallop left was amply demonstrated at the New Boston alleys when they hung up a new league record of 1521 in defeating R. S. Hoffman & Co., by 14 pins.

The major portion of the hard work for the winners was accomplished by Whitcomb brushing 319 maples into the pits, Clancy getting 315, Peak coming across with 307, while Birtwell got in a string for 128.

Bowman put up a desperate battle for Hoffman's, not letting up till the final box had been rolled and his score showed 335. Zink also kept plugging along, getting 313 for his efforts.

The leaders of the Insurance League, Field & Cowles, was above the 1500 mark by a dozen pins, their top men being Peckham with 328, and Bailey having 319.

SIZZLING PAIR

There was a red-hot pair of bowlers at Shanleys in Ferry and Peden of Filene's in the Retail Stores League, their combined scores summing up to 697 of which Peden secured a total of 354 and Ferry was right there with 343.

This rare display of bowling skill gave the Filene's a mark of 1582, a high both in the league team record, and placing at a point where it is very [illegible] to stick for the remainder of the season.

Gray, of the Bottler's League at the Huntington Club, covered himself with all sorts of bowling glory by setting two records, the single string with 1[illegible], and the three strings with 355.

Then there is K[illegible] of the Jordan Marsh L[illegible] out to keep the new record [illegible] compete, who [illegible] off with his opening string netting him 147, the best string mark of the season in the league. Others to hang up sizable scores were Lane's 330, Molley's 321 and Galvin's 320.

IN TRUE STRIDE

It takes some time for an old-timer to get warmed up, but finally Terry Griffin of the City Hall League at the 20th Century, struck his true stride and reeled off a three-string total of 322.

Terry gained his reputation on the alleys when a member of Bill Beattey's championship team, comprising Paul Phoeler, Archie Walsh, Jack Taylor and Sam Paige.

KICKERS

OPEN DRILL

By Associated Press

New Haven, Ct., Feb. 20—The far horizon of the 1935 football season drew closer for Yale men today as word went out over the campus that a call would be issued for kickers tomorrow.

While no date has been set for spring practice, the thud of leather will be heard in the Coxe memorial.

Earle "Greasy" Neale perched himself on a desk in the Ray Tompkins House today and stressed the amount of work that must be accomplished before September.

"A large share of this year's success," the varsity backfield coach and assistant to Raymond W. "Ducky" Pond, head coach, said, "goes to the fine spring practice we had last year."

Speaking of Roscoe Rankin and Whitehead, Neale said they probably will form the nucleus of the 1935 team, but he would not forecast a selection for backs.

Denny Myers, football line coach, said most of the material in the center of the line would come from this year's freshman squad.

SO WHAT?

San Francisco, Feb. 20—No relation to the brothers Dean of Cardinals' fame, Oscar Farmer Dean, 23-year-old pitcher, signed a contract with the Mission Reds of the Coast League. Young Dean, modestly stated he would win 20 games this season.

TINY

CRESCENTS

Tiny Thompson, peerless goalie of the Bruins, has a world of praise for the Crescent A. C. team of New York, which is coming to the Boston Arena to play the "Olympics" next Monday.

Three of the star players on the New York outfit are natives of Tiny's home town, Calgary, Alberta. These boys are Neil and Mac Colville, high scoring forwards, and "Slug" Gardiner, goal keeper.

These three players, according to Thompson, are the outstanding amateur players developed in Calgary since the palmy days of "Dutch" Gainor and "Tiny" himself.

Tiny Thompson

Colville has just completed his most successful season. He is the leading scorer in the Eastern Amateur hockey league, winding up the year with a total of 31 points.

Brother "Mac" is also right up with the leaders in the Eastern Amateur hockey league, while Gardiner has the honor of having the least goals scored on him of any net minder in the circuit.

GEHRIG NO. 1 BASEBALL MAN

SUCCESSOR TO FADING BABE

SMART

CAN HIT, FIELD AND IS MOST DURABLE

By Joe Cashman

After a decade of playing second fiddle to Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig became top man of the majors when he signed a 1935 contract calling for a salary of $30,000.

Only Bill Terry, Joe Cronin and Mickey Cochrane among the playing fraternity will draw down more money for the season than the Yankee's first-sacker and all three must pilot as well as play for their sugar.

Except as a gate attraction, Columbia Lou is a worthy successor to Ruth as the game's outstanding individual. The New Rochelle Dutchman is the current home run king and champion hitter and run manufacturer of the American League.

Defensively, he's equally brilliant and the diamond has never seen his equal for durability. He hasn't missed a game since he succeeded Wally Pipp as the Yanks' regular first baseman, ten years back, a run of 1504 consecutive tilts.

NONE BETTER

In fact, Lou has plenty of claim to the honor of being the greatest initial sacker ever.

Frank Chance, Fred Tenney, Hal Chase, George Sisler and Bill Terry may have been slightly superior in one department or another, but for all-around ability none of them had anything on Larrupin' Lou.

Unlike most of the other all-time greats, Lou didn't appear on the big league scene a finished performer.

He was a mighty slugger back in his college days up on Morningside Heights. That let him out as a ball player.

His fielding was atrocious, to put it mildly. He moved around the bag as though he had two left feet. If he ever was in the right position on a play, it was a mistake. He had no more baseball brains than a kindergarten pupil.

Today he can field rings around most of his rivals and it's sheer folly to try to outguess him.

He's probably the best example that can be offered in proof of the theory that practice makes perfect.

RABBIT

Rabbit Maranville can't make the "Boost the Braves" committee meeting at the Copley Plaza this evening. A radio contract prevents the midget leaving his home in Rochester before this afteroon. He'll be here in the morning.

Bob Quinn is living up to all his old Red Sox policies in his berth as business manager of the Dodgers.

Van Lingo Mungo, Brooklyn mound ace and only holdout, has been ordered to stay away from training camp at Orlando, Fla., until he agrees to terms.

Quinn was one of the first big league executives to refuse uniforms to unsigned players.

Leaving here late last week with the intention of returning Monday, General Manager Eddie Collins of the Red Sox hasn't yet returned to his desk at Fenway Park.

So it is not known whether any of the six Sox, who were unsigned when he left, have since joined the fold. It is expected that Eddie will show up today.

THE first Union Leader tobacco I ever saw was smoked by an extra, on location. He said he smoked it because he got so much for 10¢. But he looked as though he enjoyed it; so I thought I'd gamble a dime and buy a tin of Union Leader myself.

It was the mellowest Kentucky Burley I ever packed in my pipe. And it's been a buddy of mine ever since. It's much more appealing to my taste and costs much less than my former brand. (I like it in cigarettes, too.)

St. Louis Owner Mad at Ducky Wucky Medwick

By George E. Phair
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Schoolboy Rowe declined an invitation to make a speech to the Arkansas legislators. If it were Dizzy Dean, they would have to pass a law to stop him.

Football next season will be faster but less musical. In other words, there will be more action and less whistle blowing. The public does not pay to hear a referee tooting a symphony.

Carnera and Impelliitiere celebrated the signing of the papers at Jack Dempsey's restaurant, right near the cheese counter.

Those Eagles of St. Louis are screaming about the roughness of the Boston Bruins, to which the Bruins might reply: "Are the Eagles still in the league?"

If Ducky Medwick continues to hold out, you may hear Sam Breadon inquiring of his fellow-magnates. "Wanna buy a ducky?"

There is talk of calling out police reserves for the impending Penn-Columbia basketball game in the Palestra, but can you imagine a rough house in a place with a fancy name like that?

"GRAY DANGER IN THE BAY"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

They say, fellow adventurers, that our big cities are full of sharks. Not the regular, piscatorial variety, you know, but the human kind. They tell me there are pool sharks in pool rooms and loan sharks in hock shops, and I remember one time, myself, getting into an argument over a pair of jacks with a bird who turned out to be a card shark.

FLOYD GIBBONS

But I've got a yarn here today from a girl who had an adventure with a REAL shark—with two or three sharks, as a matter of fact. And what is more, she didn't have to go to Bermuda or Atlantic City or any place else to have it. No sir. She tangled up with those sharks right at home.

[illegible] and get into a [illegible] with a shark who has you all picked out for his next [illegible].

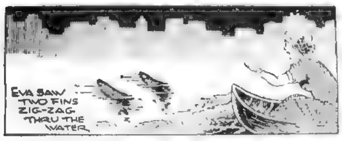
It was in August that [illegible] began to make her acquaintance with the ways of sharks. She [illegible] paddling around in the waters at the [illegible] where the East River meets Long I[illegible] 250 feet out from the pier of the [illegible] which Eva is a member, when [illegible] through the water behind [illegible] canoe.

Eva and her friend were [illegible] yelled for help. Over at the country club [illegible] heard the cries and came out [illegible] had a gun and they hunted for those sharks for two or three hours, but finally it got dark and they had to give up the chase.

After it was all over Eva thought it had been quite a lark.

But some encounters with sharks are not so much fun as others. Hardly a week had passed before Eva found that out.

It was six days later, on the 21st of August. Again Eva was going out for a paddle in her canoe. This time she had a young lad with her—a young fellow by the name of Charley Jo[illegible]. Charley was in the stern paddling the canoe and Eva was [illegible] in the bow holding her little dog [illegible] on her lap.



EVA SAW TWO FINS ZIG-ZAG THRU THE WATER

They had only gone about 200 yards from the Country Club pier this time, and two or three [illegible] Charley Jones had mentioned that there was some [illegible] floating in the water under the canoe. But that had [illegible] nothing to Eva. She had forgotten all about [illegible] the moment. She had replied that it must be the reflection of the sun on the water and dismissed the matter from her mind.

But it wasn't one of those matters that [illegible] missed. Suddenly Eva's little dog let out a [illegible]. It wasn't a bark. It wasn't a snarl. It was one of those [illegible] that dogs let out when they're faced with [illegible] and at the same time the pup began [illegible] snarling at someth[illegible] over the side of the canoe.

Eva looked in the direction [illegible] and gave a low scream. In the water [illegible] was a giant shark, at least [illegible] its big, glistening fin sticking [illegible] above [illegible].

At that moment the shark dived. It went under the canoe and came up on the other side. It was so close this time that Eva could have touched it. It was no sooner up than it dived again. This time it was closer. Too close. Eva felt the rasp of its body as it rubbed against the under side of the canoe.

The shark came up by the stern of the boat—dived again. This time it hit that frail canoe a terrific bang with its tail. The canoe tilted over on one side. Water began pouring in over the gunwhale. When it righted itself again the canoe was half full of water.

Eva screamed. Charley Jo[illegible] and howled. [illegible] Eva that her fa[illegible] any moment [illegible] again against [illegible] fish didn't bot[illegible] away by the [illegible] his tail had h[illegible] any rate, he [illegible] him to.

It wasn't [illegible] easily again. [illegible] logged canoe [illegible] watched for a[illegible] again they fo[illegible] dent in the bo[illegible] big as a dis[illegible]

CHINESE Play Role of Eskimos On Stage

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Interesting among the cast of "Petticoat Fever" at the Plymouth are the three little Eskimos—who are not Eskimos at all, but Chinese—except that one of them is a Korean.

George Holland

W[illegible] of the three little Eskimos to report [illegible] I had a [illegible] with Dennis King at a reception sponsored by Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French yesterday at her famous Charlotte Cushman Club.

Mr. King is an unselfish star. When he learned that the [illegible] of his "Petticoat Fever" [illegible] present [illegible] copy he [illegible] in this space be [illegible] for a later day.

* * *

Here are the brief [illegible]graphies of the three little Eskimos:

Peter [illegible] the [illegible] member of this theatrically quaint trio is perhaps the best known Chinese actor on the English speaking stage.

He has appeared in everything from musical comedy to melodrama and while usually cast as a Chinese has appeared as Japanese, a [illegible] Arab Celonese, South Sea Island and American Indian.

His present role is the first time he has been [illegible] to portray an Eskimo.

* * *

Nace Kondo is a Chinese although from a far northern Mongolian province, while Peter Chan Gong comes from near Peking. Miss Kondo is one of the few Chinese girls who has been able to find roles on the American stage. She learned her acting as a small child in the famous old Chinese theater on Pell street in New York's Chinatown.

* * *

Gale Kanato, the remaining member of the trio, is content usually to be [illegible] Chinese as it curtails [illegible]. As a matter of fact Miss Kanato is descended from a royal family of Korea.

Why instead of Chinese and a Korean are not real Eskimos employed in the cast of "Petticoat Fever"? The producers are ready with several reasons.

To import Eskimos, Messrs. Richard Aldrich and Alfred de Liagre, Jr., maintain a veritable Arctic expedition would have to be organized. The acting Eskimos procured, it is highly probable that they would be useless because of a lack of English and acting instinct.

Finally (I hope we have no Eskimo circulation) the producers declare and they quote such authorities as Admiral Peary, it is highly improbable that a Boston audience, or even a Cleveland or Cincinnati audience would submit to the blubber-fed, walrus-nurtured, native aroma of the transplanted Eskimo.

* * *

Al Duffy, for five years general press representative [illegible] Boston, will leave his [illegible] post on March 2 to become [illegible] manager for Phil Baker.

Special Program for Children

Several hundred children from the Home for Destitute Catholic Children will [illegible] performance for the benefit of the Guild of the Infant Saviour at Loew's State Saturday morning at 9.45.

The attractions for the program have been chosen for their special appeal to young people, and will feature "Flirtation Walk," with Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler.

Los Angeles, Feb. 20—James Cagney is blossoming out socially and professionally. When he first came to Hollywood the Cagneys were seldom seen at any festivities. Of late he and Mrs. Cagney have been circulating—and Jimmie, who is very intelligent, has proved to be a right entertaining fellow.

His next [illegible] Warner Brothers [illegible] and will [illegible]

Louella O. Parsons

[illegible] has been [illegible] Hal Wallis [illegible] to [illegible] one of the [illegible] Stewart [illegible] and [illegible] Paramount [illegible]

Jean Harlow [illegible] the period costumes of "The Gorgeous Hussy." She [illegible] for a young Washington [illegible] Andrew Jackson [illegible] and [illegible] in the spotlight of Samuel Hopkins Adams' [illegible] novel up to the age of six.

Jean starts work on "The Gorgeous Hussy" immediately [illegible] "China Seas" with [illegible] Selznick [illegible] the producer of the show [illegible] Hollywood [illegible] popular play [illegible] been seen in a costume drama.

* * *

Ernst Lubitsch, who is making the most of all the available Paramount talent, [illegible] young Ray Milland a chance. This boy really has a delightful personality and I thought he was particularly good in "The Gilded Lily." You may disregard most of the previous Sylvia Sidney plans and consider "Lightning Strikes Twice," with Miss Sidney and Milland as her leading man, as a coming event. Of course, the title will be changed.

* * *

The dear old radio has bought many plays from the movies but the first case on record, as far as I know, where the movies have stepped in, bought [illegible] is "The Radio Murder Case." [illegible] Eliston Berger. Roy Del Ruth heard the three-act radio sketch on a Chicago station and promptly wired and purchased the movie rights. If he cannot interest either Twentieth Century or Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the play he will go out and produce it himself—that is what he thinks of it.

* * *

Chatter in Hollywood: The arrival of George Brent and Loretta Young at "Small Miracle" the other night created no end of comment. George was crazy over Loretta in the days before he married Ruth Chatterton and there were those who intimated that in spite of the Garbo interlude he still had a strong feeling in his heart for the lovely Loretta. George was devotion itself to her during the play and it was interesting to see the two of them together again.

'De Luxe' Swiftly Paced

Shubert Premiere

Play Based on Life in Paris Proves Absorbing

By HARRIS MORGAN

Swiftly and definitely paced for Broadway, "De Luxe," a new play by Louis Bromfield and John Gearon, brought a distinguished company to the stage of the Shubert last evening.

The time is this fevered age in Paris with the no longer rich but still idle international remnants of pre-war glories and profits tossing off epigrams and champagne with bravely assumed nonchalance. The authors have somewhat bitterly and very cleverly held up a gilt-edge mirror to society, and the reflection, while most unlovely, is never uninteresting.

Much of the Huxley character decadence rears its ugly and fascinating head in the group of expatriates who gather at the Ritz while the band plays on. There's Fanny Altemus, madly and unmercifully in love with Pat Dantry, a young man with a leg full of shrapnel but otherwise undamaged, and a little bored.

* * *

There's Sabine Brandon, a war widow, hovering between being rich again as the wife of Ogden Travis, whom she labels a "respectable old lecher," and re[illegible] a long lost love with Pat. [illegible] Travis, young, amazing[illegible] us among her un-inhibited companions, is wondering whether to renounce her millions for—you've guessed it—a struggling newspaper man.

Lady Daisy Dantry, the daughter of an earl, "ignoring" poverty; Sophie Parsely, nee O'Hara, enormously rich and from El Paso, crashing the sagging gates of the weedy [illegible] garden of European society "launched" by Lottie M[illegible] makes such momentous matters her well-paid business. Princess D'Orobelli snaps her fingers for her gigolo, of whom she demands just two evenings a week.

* * *

It's a highly explosive crew, and with the smartest of dialogue, which will remain intact in Boston only through a major miracle, some highly dramatic situations, and a faint nostalgia for the glamorous days of Picardy roses and fevered patriotism, the playwrights have kept it an almost continually absorbing play.

Of the large and very excellent cast, Blanche Ring as the bibulous Texan, Violet Heming as the weary-wise Sabine, Ann Andrews as Lady Daisy, who couldn't take it, after all, and Melvyn Douglas as the most attractive man in Paris, carry their honors with ease and grace.

So, too, do Cora Witherspoon as the too obvious Fanny, Elsa Maxwell in a part that should have been easy for the party leader of two continents, Claudia Morgan and Alan Bunce as the younger generation, Ivy Troutman and Peppy De Albrew, Clyde Fillmore, Florence Edney and Beverley Sitgreaves.

The stunning sets are by Jo Mielziner.

The large audience demanded Mr. Bromfield, who bowed briefly, and they were generous in their response to a play that combines bitterness and banter in the neatest dramatic trick of the season.

Disney Feature

Since Mickey Mouse has gone "technicolor," the zero hour for black and white films draws nearer. Walt Disney is planing a full length cartoon feature in color, and Mickey himself will soon be seen in his first all color feature "The Band Concert."

Bowdoin

The midweek program at the Bowdoin, continuing through Saturday, offers five acts of RKO vaudeville, together with a double feature screen bill.

"Helldorado," with Richard Arlen, Madge Evans, Ralph Bellamy, Jimmy Gleason and Stepin Fetchit in featured roles, shares screen honors with "The County Chairman," starring Comedian Will Rogers.

The usual Wednesday night radio audition is scheduled for this evening, once more under the direction of Earle Nelson.

In Musical

Helen Broderick, star of the Broadway musicals, joins the RKO studios this week to take part in the new Rogers musical film, "Top Hat." Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire are the stars of the production.

INTEREST Growing IN MONETARY Matters

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The gold decisions have done for monetary matters what the flotation of Liberty bonds did for investment markets. Aroused widespread interest.

People have become conscious of the fact they must guard against philanderers who could destroy not only the value of their money but their savings as well. The creation of this desirable situation opens the way for new leaders who will find the spread of monetary knowledge facilitates the preaching of sound doctrines. Of these new leaders we think Frank A. Vanderlip, onetime assistant secretary of the Treasury and former head of the National City Bank of New York, will occupy a prominent place.

Frank A. Vanderlip

* * *

As we see it the evolution of currency and monetary policies under these new leaders will not of necessity follow along familiar lines. There will be changes and many of them. The first is already with us in the form of a gold bullion standard instead of a gold exchange standard. The question of the moment is whether the final result will or will not be a form of managed currency. Some organizations, such as the Committee for the Nation, see the gold clause cases opening the way for managed currency. In any event we understand Mr. Vanderlip will be in Boston next week to address a luncheon meeting of the Executives Club of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and his remarks on currency and banking legislation will be awaited by the writer with great interest.

* * *

Notebook: In the beginning more liberal money doctrines will meet with stubborn opposition from reactionaries, who insist that while all the world changes, money and its handling do not . . . Always keep in mind, however, that there is a large body of English banking and economic thinkers that do think it changes . . . And for the most part these people are thinking in terms of managed currency . . . Up to date, it is hard to claim that the prevalence of their ideas has hurt Britain.

* * *

Our mixed comments on the market, featuring a moderately skeptical view toward the list as a whole and a desire to be bullish on certain issues, is simply a reflection of a belief that highly selective market conditions will continue to rule for a time yet. There is a rather large body of stocks that, while taking cognizance of general weakness, gives up ground grudgingly, and, when periods of relative stability rule, manage to outrun the majority of stocks. We have attempted to note these in part.

* * *

Shorts: Most obvious reflection of above condition is the diverse behavior of rail and industrial shares . . . In general earnings outlook sets the style . . . While labor and profit conditions are a matter of concern . . . Telephone is a laggard still . . . For some weeks now it has steadfastly ignored both up and down movements of the list . . . Utilities are the forgotten stocks on the tape . . . And the public is becoming more and more convinced it should get out of the group.

* * *

Steel shares are struggling. In a broad way, judging by U. S. Steel, the group has been wallowing in a sidewise rut for over a month. The news has been with them and little has happened marketwise to indicate equity steel issues are cheap in relation to operating conditions. Second quarter possibilities are vague, but barring a spurt in construction and motor activity it takes something of an optimist to picture the immediate future as one of glowing promise for the steel industry.

State Street Sidelights

J. S. Bache & Co.—Unless the inertia in the stock market and in some branches of the business, during the weeks preceding the delivery of the gold clause decisions, was entirely meaningless, there is sound reason behind the belief that elimination of the uncertainties involved in the gold clause will have an opposite effect on business and market initiative in the early future.

Josephthal & Co.—The firm tone of the bond market and the steadiness in dividend-paying industrial stocks indicate that investment demand will continue to be a sustaining factor marketwise and the worst we anticipate is a period of irregularity for the next few days.

Shields & Co.—Current trade hesitancy is likely to last a week or so longer and be followed by further improvement in the early spring so that policy of buying on reactions remains warranted.

SHIPMENTS OF CEMENT AT LOWER RATE

The Portland cement industry in January produced 3,202,000 barrels, shipped 2,846,000 barrels from the mills and had in stock at the end of the month 21,816,000 barrels, according to Bureau of Mines.

Production and shipments of Portland cement in January, 1935, showed decreases of 15.3 per cent and 24.7 per cent, respectively, as compared with January, 1934.

Portland cement stocks at mills were 11.6 per cent higher than a year ago. The factory value of the shipments from mills in 1934, 75,917,000 barrels, is estimated at $115,771,000.

Walter Winchell Tells You "Why to go Where!"

And listen, Mr. and Mrs. America . . . here are some okay spots to visit when you're grabbing brass rings (or rails) on the night life Merry-go-round!

BRADFORD HOTEL

Two spots here—the Cascades and the Cocktail Bar—in the Cascades Agnes Toll (yoo hoo) plays a harp—and Elliot Daniels leads the orchestra—while in the Cocktail Bar we find, even without looking, Glory Davis (whee)—who sings French, Spanish, Italian, Russian and English—what, no Portuguese?

G & W Bottled-in-Bond Whiskies . . . an all-star cask of six year old liquors bottled and bonded under Canadian Government supervision . . . made by a distillery now well into its second century . . . whiskies whose body is like nectar and whose bouquet is like incense! . . . So fine that whatever else you are used to, one trial of G & W Bottled-in-Bond Whiskies will forever alienate your affections.

PARKER HOUSE

For men only—the stag bar downstairs at the Parker House—and a scallion to the mugg who cracks about the stag at eve, etc.—the Parker House is proud of its old age—they say the good die young—but the Parker House is as lively as ever—so there's a mistake somewhere.

G & W Star Blended Whiskies . . . ask for them . . . and serve them in your home. G & W 7 Star, 5 Star and 2 Star are among the best sellers everywhere . . . favorites when a blend of rich, mellow whiskey is in order.

STOCKS

HEAVY Utilities Break to New Lows

New York, Feb. 20—The stock market broke sharply late today as acute weakness in the utilities spread to the rest of the list producing losses running to more than 2 points.

Trading, which had been at a slow pace during the forenoon, picked up substantially on the downturn and the ticker was hard set at times to keep up with the dealings.

Volume diminished near the close and the late tone was heavy.

The selling, aside from the weakness in utilities, was inspired by the inability of the market to proceed with the rally started on Monday following the gold decision.

Liquidation in the power and light shares was apparent from the opening gong. Consolidated Gas, Public Service, United Gas Improvement, North American and American Water Works broke to new lows, some of them to the lowest levels since listing on the New York Stock Exchange.

Railroad shares were the next to weaken. Achison dropped more than 2 points. New York Central, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and other carriers suffered slightly smaller losses. Poor January earnings reports and indications of a drop in car loadings was partly responsible for the selling.

Regulation

Selling of public utilities seemed to be based not only on the controversy over the federal government's plans to regulate and eventually eliminate holding companies, but also on reports of reduced earnings.

Southern California Edison reported 1934 net of $1.18 a common share against $1.26 a common share in 1933, and Public Service of Northern Illinois reported net of $2.85 a share last year compared with $3.26 the previous year. Public Service of N. J. reported January surplus, after charges, of $2,694,672 against $3,029,198 for the same month the year previously.

A different showing was made by Edison Electric of Boston, however, which showed net for January of $785,469 or a little better than the $750,780 for the same month last year.

The announcement at mid-day that American Telephone had ordered another quarterly dividend of $2.25 left its pre-depression annual rate of $9.00 a share still intact.

There was less speculation in advance of the announcement this time over the possibility of a reduction because of the recent improvement in telephone business. Some quarters, however, had suggested that it might be cut in view of the federal government's investigation.

CURB

Stocks Are IRREGULAR

New York, Feb. 20 (INS)—The Curb market held narrowly at the outset today, with further improvement in selected specialties the bright spot.

Fajardo Sugar continued in demand, advancing a point to 80, on top of yesterday's 4-pont jump. Aluminum preferred was up ½ at 71½, with lesser gains credited to American Cyanamid B, Greyhound, Carrier Corp. and Allied Mills.

Lake Shore rose ⅜ to 54 in the metal list, while Distillers, Ltd., gained ⅛ to 22⅞ among the alcohols.

Utilities continued in supply, with such favorites as Electric Bond & Share and United Gas barely steady.

Oils and investment trusts were dull and little changed.

Cities Service common held steady at 1¼.

Stock Market Timetable

10-11—New York traction issues were lower in the first half hour. Rails were steady. Tone was irregular. Sales approximated 230,000 shares.

11-12—Steady tone prevailed as stocks held close to the lows in second hour dealings. Scattered selling continued but trading was generally quiet. Sales amounted to 390,000 shares.

12-1—Mixed trend marked third hour dealings. Tractions extended losses. Rails and utilities were easy. A few specialties were higher. Transactions were 520,000 shares.

1-2—List worked fractionally lower in the fourth hour. Trading was dull. No group was outstanding. Sales were 720,000 shares.

2-3—Moderate selling carried prices lower in the final hour. All groups eased. Volume dried up near the close. Late tone was heavy. Sales were estimated at 910,000 shares.

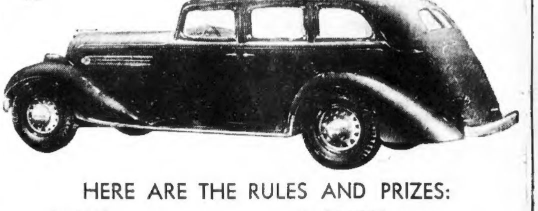
AUTO IDENTITY CONTEST
500 GALLONS GASOLINE FREE!
...15 PRIZES...

It's simple . . . Any one can win . . . Elsewhere on this page, the names of five 1935 automobiles are hidden among the Classified Ads. One of these makes will be the car pictured below. Paste the right make under the car and write the name of a dealer handling that car. Every day for fifteen days, February 17th to March 3rd, inclusive, the American-Advertiser will publish pictures of 1935 automobiles.

4.



HERE ARE THE RULES AND PRIZES:

RULES:

1. Everyone is eligible to participate in the "Auto Identity Contest" except employees and families of employees of automobile concerns, their advertising agents; and of the American and Advertiser.

2. The "Auto Identity Contest" consists in identifying the different makes as they are printed, together with naming a dealer who sells that car.

3. Every day from Feb. 17th to March 3rd, inclusive, pictures of 1935 automobile models will be published. Only one picture of any one make will be published.

4. Clip the picture out of the paper, and from one of names of five makes that will be scattered among the Classified ads, paste the right make of the car under the picture, along with the name of a dealer who sells that car. HOLD all pictures until all fifteen have been published, and then mail them to the "Auto Identity Editor," Boston Sunday Advertiser, 5 Winthrop Square.

5. All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, March 5th. No entries will be returned to the sender.

6. Fifteen prizes, in accordance with the complete prize list published herewith, will be given to persons sending in the first fifteen correct answers to the contest. Neatness will count.

7. A committee of judges will be appointed by the American and Advertiser to determine the winners. All entrants agree to accept the decision of the judges as final.

8. It is not necessary to purchase the American or Advertiser to compete. The newspapers may be examined at our offices or at the public libraries free of charge, and if you wish you may copy or trace the pictures and then assemble the sets from the copies you have made.

The Democratic Party and Its Forgotten Pledges

"The Democratic Party solemnly promises:

"1. An immediate and drastic reduction of governmental expenditures by abolishing useless commissions and offices, consolidating departments and bureaus, and eliminating extravagance, to accomplish a saving of not less than 25 per cent in the cost of federal government.

"2. Maintenance of the national credit by a federal budget annually balanced."

From the Democratic national platform, 1932.

"The platform is a promise BINDING ON THE PARTY AND ITS CANDIDATES."

"I have accepted the platform WITHOUT EQUIVOCATION and WITHOUT RESERVE."

"Let us have the courage TO STOP BORROWING to meet continuing deficits. STOP THE DEFICITS."

From the campaign speeches of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Patriotism First and Last

Without That, All Else Fails

FULLY as vital to national defense as soldiers and sailors, ships, guns, and airplanes is the INTEGRITY OF AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS and their protection from alien propaganda.

The propaganda of Communism and other foreign "isms" is no less dangerous to national safety than foreign fleets and armies and air squadrons.

Such propaganda weakens America from within—and it is the more insidious because it operates in time of peace, and often in guises which conceal its true nature.

Our country is the "happy hunting ground" of foreign lecturers and writers, many of them on the payroll of Moscow.

Our universities and public schools are strategic points for the spread of Communist doctrine.

Our financial system, our tariff system, our merchant marine policy—most of our national activities—are targets for foreign influence, and this influence is designed to help foreign countries AT AMERICAN EXPENSE.

THERE is hardly a European nation that does not owe us money.

There is not one of these debtors, except Finland, which has paid up or is attempting to pay.

There is almost universal envy of our national wealth, an almost universal conviction that the undermining of American democracy is desirable—FOR EUROPE.

Thus the plain duty of every American is to stand by American institutions, to build them up, and rid the land of all who would tear them down.

In this National Defense Week, and in every week and month and year, the safeguarding of our methods and traditions of government is as important as the strengthening of our armed forces.

Patriotism, after all, is the first and last line of national defense.

Whatever tends to weaken America's respect for its own hallowed institutions is as menacing as MILITARY INVASION, and it should be dealt with as mercilessly as we would deal with a hostile army if it landed on our shores.

Ability and Honesty

Police Need ABLE Leader

Boston demands two qualifications in its police commissioner.

One is that he shall be ABLE.

The other is that he shall be HONEST.

We do not believe that it makes the slightest bit of difference whether he is a civilian or a policeman.

Boston must have a commissioner ABLE to organize his department against organized crime, ABLE to close the gambling, vice and dope dens, and ABLE to drive out or jail criminals and racketeers.

The man ABLE to do these things must also be HONEST enough to do them.

Whether such a man is a civilian or a policeman is not at all important.

Sales Tax Bill

"Just One More"

Does Massachusetts want a sales tax that will drive a considerable portion of its retail trade across the state lines?

That is the effect of a state sales tax.

And that is why important authorities on taxation advocate a Federal general manufacturers' sales tax in place of state sales taxes.

Daniel Bloomfield, manager of the retail trade board of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, puts a finger on another reason why the bill offered by Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long should NOT be passed.

"It removes no other taxes, but is just one more tax," Mr. Bloomfield points out.

Hit-Run Drivers

The Right Treatment

Registrar Frank A. Goodwin follows a suggestion made in a Boston Evening American editorial some time ago when he declares he will never re-issue licenses to hit-run autoists.

Mr. Goodwin declares:

"The meanest and lowest crime I know of is to knock some innocent person down and leave him dying on the street when medical aid might save his life."

The hit-run driver thinks only of the consequences to himself, and never gives a thought to his victim.

He deserves no mercy.

Saving the Babies

Boston Record Good

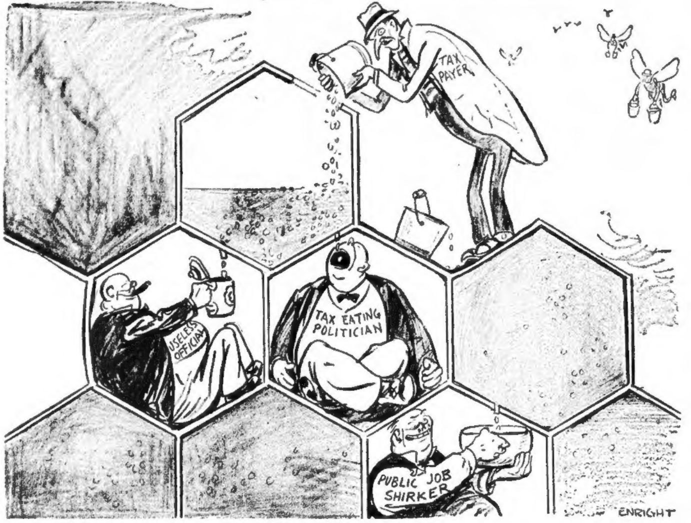
Vital statistics recently made public show the infantile death rate here to be only one-third that of 1900.

The twentieth century has plainly recorded notable progress in the medical profession.

Happily, this progress has not been confined to Boston alone.

The outstanding bit of color in baby saving is that of the country doctor directing care of the five little Dionnes.

The Honeycomb of Government



The Worker and the Drones

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

YOU CAN'T LABEL PEOPLE

You can't label people as you would vegetables or hardware. And you're only wishing grief on yourself if you decide that people are this or that and then expect them to act accordingly. People are never so simple.

Elsie Robinson

People are not bad OR good. They are bad AND good at the same time. People aren't wise OR foolish, kind OR cruel, honest OR dishonest, brave OR timid, nice OR nasty.

They are ALL these things within the same nature at the same moment. And the reason is obvious—

NEAR TO JUNGLE

We haven't come very far from the jungle yet, we humans. We're still close to our dark animal beginnings . . . still bound by the fears and hungers that rule animal life.

There's mighty little difference between the feelings of a baby man and a baby gorilla. They're both timid and greedy, both selfish and ruthless in getting their own way.

And all through life that brute nature persists, side by side with our taller desires—gorilla struggling against man, man struggling against gorilla.

That struggle constantly confuses you and upsets your plans. It bewilders you in yourself. It infuriates you in the other fellow.

You try to escape from it by tying tickets to things. Saying that This Thing is Good, and That Thing is Bad. But it can't be done! For nothing is entirely right—nor entirely wrong.

YOU RESENT IT

The most gracious act may root in the most cussed motive—and the most deplorable mess may have sprung from a noble urge.

You recognize this fact easily enough in your own life yet can never get to it in the Other Fellow's. Even if you don't or can't, run true to form you think he should, and you grow resentful when he doesn't.

Most of your misery comes from this attempt to fit people and life to your own fastastic pattern, instead of taking them as they are. Out of it springs all your loneliness and bitterness.

Actually people are much more wonderful as they are than as you'd like to have them—and much more companionable. For if they are a cantankerous mixture, so are you! And there's infinite comfort in this fact, if you'll accept it.

People don't really fail you. They fail your notion of them—which is quite a different matter. But if you'd take the inevitable cussedness and confusion of other people as you take your own, tolerantly, good-naturedly, you'd find amazing co-operation.

YOU'LL BE SURPRISED

You wouldn't be so sad if you knew that millions of others were struggling with the same inert darkness—

You wouldn't be so bad if you knew that every person you see, however proud or pious, was beset by the same temptations.

You wouldn't be so mad at everyone and everything if you knew that the Other Fellow was as muddled as you are yourself—as unable to understand or control his acts.

IF YOU CAN GET ALONG WITH YOURSELF, YOU CAN GET ALONG WITH ANYONE.

QUIT LABELING PEOPLE AND GETTING SORE BECAUSE THEY DON'T FIT YOUR LABELS. ACCEPT THEM AS THEY COME AND TAKE A CHANCE ON THEM. YOU'LL BE SURPRISED!

Stars and Stripes

A baby was born in a crowded Brooklyn subway train the other day. There's always room for one more in a subway train.

Among those voting "No, No, a Thousand Times No," on almost everything, is the Hon. Carter Glass, of Virginia.

This depression is tough on the poor little rich girl. She doesn't know where her next mama is coming from.

What if John D. Rockefeller is living like a hermit in Florida? Maybe these are hard dimes for him, too.

Government is to keep film records of American history. If "talkies" are added, the censor will have a job penciling some of those at odds with the administration.

Wellfleet sets the pace by being first to prepare bathing suits for 1935. More people are interested in how soon they'll be able to wear them.

Sing Sing is trying a magnetic "gun detector." Pretty soon a convict may have to face a judge if found carrying concealed weapons around our prisons.

The age of machinery has displaced the age of chivalry. Ignorance, indifference, fear are the obstacles that stand in the way of progress.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Feb. 20—In these days of impending or imagined doom, a cape should be swirled to joyous laughers. That is to those who laugh from the boots up, honestly, even boisterously. New York has a habit of wearing one down to pinched off little dry-as-Sahara smiles.

O. O. McIntyre

Nothing is more heartening than those rafter-shaking guffaws of Joe Moore, Frazier Hunt and Otis Ralston. Or Robert Benchley on the aisle at a first night. Also the balloonish way Dick Berlin has of puffing up like a pouter pigeon before letting go a cascade of chuckles.

Get Paul Whiteman off in a corner and tickle his funny bone and he'll break up meetin'. And the fellow who likely tells the funniest stories, Irvin Cobb, will laugh loudest at yours. The most amusing laughter is C. L. Edson, who opens his mouth, sticks out his tongue and bends double like a jack-knife.

In the feminine division Phyllis Haver and Mae Allison can touch off an entire room, so contagious is their laugh. The late Marie Dressler was a grand laugher, too. Miriam Hopkins can begin on a little blurt that is liable to expand to a roar. Laughers, it is noticed, are usually prosperous.

Will Rogers, most calloused of the troupers, did the greatest bit of theater fidgeting of his long career at a recent evening. But this time he was on the hither side of the curtain to attend the first night of a performance in which his daughter Mary made her Broadway debut. His long-time friend, Fred Stone, sat in a nearby seat with the smelling salts. But Rogers' qualms were unnecessary. The young lady acquitted herself creditably. So much so she won the critics' praise.

The straggling group of exiles, banished from the Russian court, bravely keep up the long ago pretenses in New York. Now and then they give a ball and bring out the dazzling costumes that once paraded before the Czar's box at such functions. All of them work for a living now in a strange new land. Grand Duchess Marie, the leader by right of title and social accomplishments, photographs professionally. Prince Matchabelli has launched a profitable perfume business. There are princes too who run dim cellar cafes and princesses who go out by the day as sempstresses. But at the balls they come back to their standing in a vanished empire.

Adela Rogers St. Johns won high honors journalistically in her ringside descriptions of the Hauptmann trial. Much of the sudden circulation spurts acquired by the newspapers for which she reported was attributed to her. Mrs. St. Johns is versed in court proceedings, for as a child she constantly attended the murder cases in which her father, a famous trial lawyer, appeared. Also she is among the few writers who does not suffer the "typewriter travail." When she sits down at the machine, whether it be a newspaper assignment, magazine article or fiction story, she races through it without a halt.

Jack Lait is another reporter whose thoughts never buck at the typewriter. When he squares off to turn off a story, he romps right along to the finish without a hesitation save to light another cigarette, the fiend. Albert Payson Terhune, in his newspaper days, was a demon of reportorial speed, so speedy indeed that for a time it threatened his writing career. He wrote by pencil so arduously that it afflicted the muscles and nerves of his right arm, rendering it for a time entirely useless.

So far as I know, there was only one American writer who wrote standing up. He was David Graham Phillips, who stood at an old-fashioned bookkeeper's high desk and used short, stubby pencils. It was his claim that thoughts were clearer in this position. Frank Ward O'Malley was a sitter on one leg. With both feet on the floor, he was ham-strung. Or Rupert Hughes without his wife sitting near by. And there was Mark Twain, who did much of his enduring work stretched out in bed.

This may explain to the doorman of the Madison why a tall, thin stranger in a gray hat suddenly greeted him so cordially at 3 p. m. yesterday. In gawking back at a smart-looking trick the old fool stepped off the curb. And in the confusion, for some idiotic reason, rushed up and shook the hand of the person nearest.

Isn't It So?

Truth has nothing to fear from the future.

If the gloom around you is dark today, if it is hard to see the way to go, you should try to carry a smile in your heart.

Those who don't care what people think of them are likely to be troublesome later on.

The more one knows the more he knows that he does not know and probably cannot know.

Life is a schoolroom, not a playground.

Swindlers Are Busy

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Concurrently, some crooks down in Philadelphia work the old satchel trick again, and once more the Stock Exchange and the Better Business Bureau are worrying about fake stock salesmen.

Edwin C. Hill

The eternal sucker is abroad again, and, of course, there are many cunningly baited hooks to catch him.

It is Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, who warns the 15,000,000 American security holders of the return of the swindlers to their old hunting grounds, where range many burnt children who haven't yet learned to dread the fire.

BACK FOR MORE

George Graham Rice—he's in the jail house now—used to say:

"You're apt to keep a customer a long time in this line; they always come back for more."

Attaches of the police and federal angencies tell me that the rackets are the same venerable swindles which have gathered millions during past decades and which were in full flower in the late boom years.

The swindler never forgets, and the victim never seems to remember, and neither of them seems ever to learn anything new.

Here's one of the old dependable swindles:

The crooks snag out of some financial ashcan a big block of worthless stock. They plant themselves in a nice, conservative-looking office impressive but not ostentatious, in a good district.

Then they get some engraved stationery, possibly closely imitating some reputable investment name, or, at any rate, a name which suggests the stability of the Bank of England.

Henry P. Hoopengarner, proprietor of the hardware store at Plum Junction, Ia., gets a letter, properly addressed to him. Opening it, he may note that it is intended for some one else, but he takes a peek at it just the same. The letter enjoins the utmost secrecy.

BLACKJACK COMMON

It has to do with certain exciting developments in Blackjack Common, which are due to jump the price of the stock 1000 per cent, and the addressee is informed as an insider that his take will be $523,241.32.

Almost before Mr. Hoopengarner can mail back the letter, he gets a frantic telegram. An important, confidential letter for another person has been sent to him by mistake.

Will he return it immediately and if he has read it, will he keep it secret, etc. Then an hour or two later there is a telephone call from New York, making the same request.

There is a plausible explanation of how the letter had been sent to Mr. Hoopengarner. They had written him, as a representative merchant, regarding business conditions in that territory, and the envelopes had been switched. Mr. Hoopengarner "accidentally" has been declared in on a big business deal.

He gets some of the Blackjack Common. The misdirected letter campaign has been carried on all over the country. The crooks dump their worthless stock at outrageous prices and walk out on their imposing offices and engraved stationery.

STATISTICS DOUBTFUL

I have seen many estimates of the number of billions taken by crooks in stock swindles, before and after the start of the depression, but it seems to me that they cannot be accurate, although carefully compiled.

Even the number of the security holders in the country is a shifting and elusive figure. While Mr. Whitney puts it at 15,000,000, there are authoritative Wall Street estimates that the diffusion of stock in small holdings has been increasing since 1929 and that there are now about 27 million holders of stocks or bonds.

Progress by Doubt

By Hendrik Van Loon

I heard a great deal about Truth, with a capital T, when I was a very small boy.

Indeed the Truth (with a capital T) was hammered into my unwilling and inattentive head by quite a number of different persons.

They seemed to have only one thing in common, their absolute and complete contempt for each other's Truth and their absolute and complete belief in their own particular Truth, writ with a very big capital T.

It so happened that the little town in which I grew up was a hotbed of undisputable Verities. It had been so ever since the days when Erasmus went there to learn his ABCs, as you may remember from your perusal of "The Cloister and the Hearth."

MATCHING TRUTHS

And in this respect, at least, it had changed very little indeed. Each small group of citizens had a little pet Truth of its own, just as each tribe on the island of Bali has its own fighting cock.

And each small group of citizens was ready, yes eager, to match its own Truth against all others, just as our Balinese friends are ready to match their own fighting cock against the rival roosters of the other villages of their lovely island.

* * *

Most of my playmates seemed to accept this state of affairs as something unavoidable.

They never questioned the desirability of this cocksure attitude towards all the problems of the world, and they are now selling herring or postage stamps as their honorable fathers and grandfathers had done before them since time immemorial.

How or at what time I became a rebel against barbarous outbreaks of hatred and suspicion, as they were practiced between followers of rival systems of the Truth (with a capital T)—that I do not know.

I find it quite impossible to determine with any degree of certainty just when I said to myself:

"Enough is enough and this will never do. This perpetual warfare and hatred between these little groups of people is silly, absurd, grotesque and obscene. They should learn to live and let live, and respect each other's opinions."

* * *

Doubt in the eyes of many honest citizens is a lady of very doubtful quality and not half as nice as Truth.

Truth in all our allegorical representations is a beautiful young woman of very superior, not to say haughty mien, who holds a couple of scales in one hand and a roll of lily white parchment or a sword in the other hand.

Whereas Doubt is never shown, because the artists apparently do not quite know what to do with her, and if they painted her as the great bringer of Light and Enlightenment, their artistic products would soon be covered with a layer of whitewash four inches thicker that what-is-his-name's stuff in Rockefeller Center.

* * *

But when we look carefully into the past we come to a very different conclusion.

Truth, once she has cajoled herself into the good graces of any particular family or group of families, invariably drops her smiling and innocent air to become an insufferable tyrant.

And in the end, so history clearly shows, it has always been the doubters who have pulled the chariot of civilization a little further along the road of progress until old Dame Truth suddenly noticed what was happening, whereupon she hastily hoisted herself on board of the triumphant band-wagon and insisted upon the most comfortable seat, on account of her eminent and well-known respectability.

* * *

It is always difficult to get an old family factotum. But it can be done, and it will be done, the moment we realize that it is Truth which enslaves us, but Doubt who sets us free.
